GEN. LEE'S RETREAT.

The Main Force of the Rebels Between Hagerstown and Williamsport.

Their Army Completely Enveloped by Our Cavalry.

The Enemy Forming a Line from Funkstown to Falling Waters.

A Portion of Early's Command Reported Cut Off in the Mountains.

Havoc Among the Rebel Wagon Trains.

Ewell's Train Nearly Destroyed by Kilpatrick.

THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS CAPTURED.

Ten Feet of Water in the Potomac at Williamsport.

ANOTHER GREAT BATTLE PROBABLE.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES FROM FREDERICK.

FREDERICK, Md., Tuesday, July 7—9 P. M.

The latest intelligence from the front places Lee's headquarters at Hagerstown to-day. The prospect of another conflict ere crossing the river is not promising. Lee secured the short line of retreat by seizing the Waynesboro Gap.

The weather is very wet, and the roads heavy, yet the troops are doing well.

The total number of prisoners captured, reported at the Provost-Marshal General's Office up to last night, including the wounded, is in the vicinity of eleven thousand. There is no truth in the stories of great amounts of artillery captured by us. It is possible that we took one battery, but even this is not certain. The reason is apparent enough,—we fought the battle entirely on the defensive, and did not pursue the enemy beyond the contested ground.

About two-thirds of the burial parties sent out to bury the rebel dead have made returns. The number reported by them is thus far twenty-six hundred and eighty. The total cannot fall under three thousand five hundred, not including those of Wednesday's fight, which the enemy himself buried.

Our losses, as to-day reported semi-officially, foot up seventeen thousand, killed, wounded and missing. The Third corps loses forty-four hundred; the Fifth corps, two thousand three hundred and forty-nine; the Twelfth corps, seven hundred and fifty; the Second corps, four thousand eight hundred. The balance I have not yet obtained.

FREDERICK, Tuesday, July 7—10 P. M.

Intelligence from the front, just received, informs us that Lee's forces are crossing the Potomac at Williamsport in two flat boats, leaving their wagons behind. This is reliable.

Our cavalry have done great service within the past week. Yesterday KILPATRICK sent in fifteen hundred prisoners, whom he had captured with the trains on Sunday evening. On that day he destroyed four hundred wagons; to-day he destroyed sixty more, and sent in three hundred horses and mules. The cavalry under BUFORD and KILPATRICK had a severe fight with the enemy's infantry yesterday, while getting out of their lines. Capt. CLINE, of the Eighteenth Illinois, was killed. Maj. WEMPLE was severely wounded.

In Gen. GREGG's fight last Thursday, both WARD, HAMPTON and JENKINS were wounded. The former had two sabre cuts on his head.

KILPATRICK says the rebel cavalry Gen. ROSSER is among the prisoners to-day, with the insignia of his rank torn off. Our cavalry have done brilliant service, and are in the highest spirits. Their losses are heavy.

FREDERICK, Tuesday, July 7—11½ P. M.

SUPER LEIDER.—The following dispatch has just been received from Mr. E. A. PAUL, your gallant cavalry correspondent with Gen. KILPATRICK.

SOUTH MOUNTAIN, Md., Sunday, July 5, 1863.

Gen. KILPATRICK's command left its position near Gettysburgh on Saturday, July 4, and started across the Mountain by way of Monterey Gap, passing through Emmittsburgh, Fountaindale, to Monterey Gap, Waterloo, Redgeville and Smithburgh, Md., where the command made a temporary halt. The train of Gen. EWELL's corps was struck near its centre where the pike crosses the Monterey road on the westerly slope of the Mountain. Before arriving at this place the command had captured four miles of wagon trains, between 1,500 and 2,000 prisoners, cavalry and infantry, about 200 officers, and 2,000 horses and mules—in fact, the entire train of EWELL's command, which was strongly guarded by both cavalry and infantry. Among the prisoners are a large number of Gen. EARLY's division.

Having written so much, I started with a scout and Capt. EATON to reach Gen. PLEASANTON's headquarters, and we were chased four miles by rebel cavalry. I send this by a scout, McCULLOUGH. We are surrounded, and expect a fight every moment. We shall win. E. A. PAUL.

FREDERICK, Md., Wednesday, July 8.

It is again necessary to caution the public against estimating the results of the late battle too highly. The number of prisoners captured, including the wounded, is now about 12,000, but we have taken no cannon.

The rain is still falling heavily, and while it may fill the Potomac, yet it will retard our army movements. The roads are very heavy. Our columns are pushing ahead, however.

A portion of Lee's force is known to be across, but we shall be up with the balance in time to get some more prisoners, at least.

FREDERICK, Md., Wednesday, July 8—12 M.

Official information, just received from the front, places Lee's main force on the right passage from Hagerstown to Williamsport. Yesterday our cavalry completely enveloped the enemy, and harassed him on front, flanks and rear.

Lee has now thrown out the corps of infantry toward Hagerstown, forming a line from Falkstown on their left to Falling Waters on their right. This commands the Hagerstown and Sharpsburgh, and Boonsboro and Williamsport turnpikes. Behind this road the enemy are pushing back as rapidly as possible. It was in forcing our cavalry back to form this line that a severe fight occurred yesterday, in which we met with considerable loss in the unequal contest with their infantry.

A portion of Gen. EARLY's command is reported cut off in the mountains.

There is ten feet of water in the Potomac at Williamsport. L. L. CROUNSE.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8—11 P. M.

The impression to-night is that the rebels, baffled in their endeavors to recross the Potomac, will intrench themselves at and about Antietam, and their swift battle, with every advantage of position and shelter.

A portion of their infantry are actually across the river, but the passage was made hesitatingly, and seemingly with a fear to put on the other side any force that might be needed on this.

It is almost certain that Lee was already thrown up works that stretch from Williamsport to Antietam.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

Messages for the Associated Press, received from Frederick, Md., to-night, say:

"Information which can be relied upon comes from the front this morning, of the following purport: The rise in the Potomac has checked the passage of the rebel army. A small portion of Lee's transportation has been crossed on rafts at Williamsport and Shepardstown, and his stock swam over. His ambulance trains, with wounded, have also crossed, but his supply trains, artillery, infantry and cavalry are reported to be nearly all on this side. His first line of battle has been formed on the Antietam Fields." Should this prove true, and it is certain that he cannot receive reinforcements, he will be compelled to trust the fate of his army to the arbitrament of a bloody field. Our forces are gradually concentrating in that direction. The hopes and prospects of annihilating the entire army of Virginia are bright. The best possible spirit animate the officers and men. As the last advices, Lee was concentrating his forces by every available route. Fearing an attack, he yesterday morning planted his batteries on every road by which we were likely to approach.

BUFORD and KILPATRICK, with the cavalry division, made a demonstration in the direction of Williamsport, but were unable to penetrate Lee's lines. Many citizens of Hagerstown, Funkstown, Williamsport and Clear Spring, have left their homes, believing a battle imminent. Some of them have arrived in Frederick, and think that Lee only placed his guns in position to keep us in check while his forces were crossing.

The reports as to the existence of rebel bridges at Williamsport are contradictory, but the general impression at Frederick is that none have been built. A scout, who was there on Tuesday, says preparations were in progress to build one. This may have been frustrated by the sudden and heavy rise in the Potomac.

Gen. MEADE and Staff have arrived at Headquarters, having ridden thirty-five miles from Gettysburgh. Several corps are understood to be nearer the point desired. A considerable force has probably reached the vicinity of Williamsport to-night. In the meantime our cavalry are on the enemy's left flank and rear, and make frequent attacks. Our scouts are frequently heard from, and their reports and confirmation of Lee's endeavors to recross the Potomac.

NEWS RECEIVED IN HARRISBURGH.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Wednesday, July 8.

News received here to-day by telegraph, by way of London and Bedford, shows that the main body of Gen. Lee's army is between South Mountain and Hagerstown.

Gen. Lee will probably select a place between Hagerstown and the Potomac to give Gen. MEADE battle, as it is considered utterly impossible for him to reach Virginia.

Gen. IMBODEN is at Williamsport with from 7,000 to 10,000 troops, protecting the rebel supply trains.

Gen. Lee's wagon train is at that point, to the number of 4,000 to 5,000, making their way into Virginia as fast as their limited means will admit.

Gen. Lee evidently sees that there is no escape for his army, and is preparing himself to give Gen. MEADE another battle, which will probably take place on Friday or Saturday.

The rain poured down in torrents last night, and has continued to do so until 12 o'clock to-day.

The present flood would destroy any pontoon bridge on the Potomac, even if the rebels had one, and it is positively known they have nothing of the kind.

The authorities are throwing troops up the valley as fast as possible.

Gen. MEADE's army and the troops under Gen. COUCH, are moving as rapidly as the roads will admit.

NEWS RECEIVED IN BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 8.

The American's special Frederick letter, dated this morning, says:

"It is no longer a question whether the Potomac is fordable, but whether any bridge the rebels may have would stand before such a flood.

It speaks of active army operations. Our cavalry are continually picking up prisoners and send them in by the hundred; also capturing or burning rebel trains. The rebels are abandoning their wounded, whom they placed in wagons taken from farms along the road. If Lee is detained at the river he can only be most desperate if not hopeless."

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 8—10 P. M.

The American's special, dated Frederick, Wednesday noon, July 8, says:

"The position of the rebels and their condition have been definitely ascertained. Their infantry line is drawn across from Funkstown, Maryland, to Falling Waters, and behind this line they are using almost superhuman exertions to get their trains, such as they have saved, and their artillery and ammunition across the river. The best military authority here doubts—I might almost say is convinced—that they have no pontoon train beside that destroyed at Falling Waters; and that with such canal-boats as they had not previously burned, and with timber felled in the vicinity of and at Hartlesburgh, they are endeavoring to supply the deficiencies of their Engineer corps. It is known that two days ago they had troops felling timber. They also attempted to cross some wagons on flat boats, but the impetuous current of the river removed the attempt futile. They are now crossing their horses on boats and leaving their wagons on this side, probably intending to take them to pieces, and thus transport them on the canal-boats.

I have heard the opinion expressed in a very high military quarter that the rebels will probably secure the most defensible line in front of Williamsport, entrench themselves, and endeavor to hold our army at bay, while they secure the means of crossing. The position of the rebels is much more desperate than I had allowed myself to think heretofore. Of course they may get away; but it looks much less probable now than it did 24 hours ago.

The cavalry of Gen. PLEASANTON have been operating with magnificent success during the last three days. It is a positive fact that while the rebels were retreating we had cavalry in their front and rear, and on both flanks. Its presence and bold dashes greatly aided in increasing the demoralization of the rebels, and their discipline has been greatly relaxed.

Lee's Headquarters are definitely ascertained to be at Hagerstown to-day, and his troops are mainly on the road between there and Williamsport, which is only seven miles distant.

Gen. EARLY's rebel command is to-day reported to be cut off in the mountains, near Greencastle, by our cavalry. This is, of course, at present only a rumor; but it is credited to some extent, in view of the knowledge of the purpose of Gen. PLEASANTON's present movement.

It is the opinion at headquarters, that our cavalry have taken not less than 6,000 prisoners, including wounded rebels who had been picked up everywhere along the road, and in farm houses, where they had been abandoned by their friends. Among the captured is Brig.-Gen. ROSSER. He had torn off the insignia of his rank, and was dressed in citizen's clothing. Brig.-Gen. TALIAFERRO, of the 19th of April and Philadelphia Railroad fame, is also a prisoner. He was found in the farm house of Mr. DAVID WILSON, near Gettysburgh, with his left foot blown off by a shell.

The damage done the rebel trains by the dashes of our cavalry is almost incredible. Everywhere they were captured, cut off and burned. Gen. KILPATRICK dashed into the middle of Gen. EWELL's train, and burnt between 200 and 300 wagons, and run off the horses. To-day he captured 60 more wagons, and 200 horses and mules. Our cavalry (I think KILPATRICK's division) had a fight yesterday at Hagerstown with a rebel infantry division. Their position was at one time dangerous, but they got out finally without serious loss.

Our army is moving steadily. Of its direction and disposition I shall say little, though the former may be readily guessed at from what is said of the position of the enemy. If Lee remains this side of the river, there is a probability of another battle within the next forty-eight hours.

As I close the heavy rain-storm is over, the sun breaking through the clouds. Forward is the word along the whole line.

GEN. JONES AND 1,000 PRISONERS.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 8.

Nearly one thousand rebels, captured by Gen. KILPATRICK, arrived here this morning, including Brig.-Gen. JONES, a cavalry officer, and 51 commissioned officers.

THE REPORTED FIGHT AT WILLIAMSPORT.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

No information has been received from Williamsport to 2 o'clock to-day. It is not believed there was a fight there yesterday, although it is probable Gen. SEDGWICK has done the enemy's rear much damage.

THE FRESHET IN THE POTOMAC.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 8.

There is a hea-y rain-storm here. The constant rain which has been falling for the last three days west of Harrisburgh insures a lasting freshet in the Potomac River for a week at least.

THE SECOND VERMONT BRIGADE.

Of the Second Vermont brigade, commanded by Gen. GEORGE J. STANNARD, the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Sixteenth regiments were engaged in the battles of Thursday and Friday. They fought like old veterans, captured a battery and three stands of colors from the enemy. Their loss in killed and wounded is reported at 300. Gen. STANNARD was wounded in the leg while leading his command.

CONGRATULATORY ORDER FROM GEN. DOUBLEDAY.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, FIRST CORPS, July 6, 1863.

The Major-General commanding the division desires to return his thanks to the Vermont brigade, the One Hundred and Fifty-first Pennsylvania Volunteers and the Twentieth New-York State militia for their gallant conduct in resisting in the front line the main attack of the enemy upon this position, after sustaining a terrific fire from seventy-five to one hundred pieces of artillery. He congratulates them upon contributing so essentially to a glorious end—it is to be hoped the final victory of yesterday.

By command of Maj.-Gen. DOUBLEDAY,
EDWARD C. BAIRD, Captain and A. A. G.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Further Details of the Battle of Gettysburgh—Characteristics of the People of the Town—Interesting Incidents, &c.

GETTYSBURGH, Tuesday, July 7, 1863.

The history of the great battle cannot now be either fully or truthfully written. The ignominious retreat of the enemy, and the pursuit of our own forces, renders the gathering of facts and lists of casualties very difficult. A thousand and one incidents remain untold, and they are all of the most interesting character. I have a dozen themes, all pressing for mention in this letter, and scarcely time for doing justice to one of them.

One of the most important is the extent of our losses. There are all sorts of wild estimates, some of them too, I am sorry to say, by gentlemen of the medical profession, who ought to know better. I have carefully culled all the reports yet in, and though the fighting was the severest of the war, yet I do not see how the actual casualties can exceed seventeen thousand, and probably will not go above fifteen thousand. Several thousand men are counted among the missing, but they are not prisoners—they are on a grand straggle, and the country from Frederick to Westminster, to Hanover, to Gettysburgh, and back again to Frederick, swarms with loose men away from their commands—luxuriating among the farm-houses as long as their money lasts, and safe from the goads of sergeants, of which, by the way, nobody has seen any lately.

The country must not over-estimate the results of the victorious contests of last week. True, people were fearfully for a success at the hands of the Army of the Potomac, and having got it, they applaud to the skies. It is already better than Antietam, and it may be a great deal better, but let not false reports be born only to be extinguished in bitter disappointment.

And to our captives. Whoever is so unmanly as to pen the deliberate falsehoods with reference to the number of prisoners and guns captured, should at once be compelled to wear a straight-jacket. Either thing could be easily verified—the first by going to the Provost-Marshal-General, and the second by going to the chief ordnance officer. I applied at the former's office last evening, and learned that the number of prisoners, including rebels wounded, thus far reported, was nearly eleven thousand. I know now that we captured no artillery whatever, and the enemy none from us.

But there is one thing the country cannot have too much of—sympathy for the fallen—or cannot give too much—aid for the wounded, and continued praise for the valorous men, whose steady and unflinching courage have turned the tide of successive disasters into a sweeping and surging victory—let a nation be truly thankful.

And speaking of this, let me make it a matter of undeniable history that the conduct of the majority of the male citizens of Gettysburgh, and the surrounding County of Adams, is such as to stamp them with dishonor and craven-hearted meanness. I do not speak hastily. I but write the unanimous sentiments of the whole army—an army which now feels that the doors from which they drove a host of robbers, thieves and cut-throats, were not worthy of being defended. The actions of the people of Gettysburgh are so sordidly mean and unpatriotic, as to engender the belief that they were indifferent as to which party was whipped. I will give a few instances.

In the first place the male citizens mostly ran away, and left the women and children to the mercy of their enemies. On their return, instead of lending a helping hand to our wounded, and opening their houses to our famished officers and soldiers, they have only manifested indecent haste to present their bills to the military authorities for payment of losses inflicted by both armies. One man yesterday presented a Captain with a bill for eighteen rails which his men had burned in cooking their coffee; On the streets the burden of their talk is their losses—and speculations as to whether the Government can be compelled to pay for this or that. Almost entirely they are uncourteous—but this is plainly from lack of intelligence and refinement. Their charges, too, were exorbitant—hotels, $3 50 per day; milk, 10 and 15 cents per quart; bread, $1 and even $1 50 per loaf; twenty cents for a bandage for a wounded soldier! And these are only a few specimens of the sordid meanness and unpatriotic spirit manifested by these people, from whose doors our noble army had driven a hated enemy. I wish it to be understood that the facts I have stated can be fully substantiated by many officers high in rank, as well as by what I personally saw and experienced. This is Adams County—a neighbor to Copperhead York, which is still nearer to the stupid and stingy Berks.

Of course there were some bright exceptions to this conduct, and one or two that came to my notice I desire to allude to here, for they richly deserve it, having interspersed a bright oasis in this desert of shameless indifference and discourtesy—a shelter-men which refused Miss DIX and her lady nurses board, because they "didn't want to be troubled with boarders."

As a honorable contrast to this sordidness was the the conduct of Prof. SWAYNE and his amiable wife. As many as twelve wounded Union soldiers at once lay upon his dining-room floor, receiving from himself and Mrs. SWAYNE constant care. His spacious yard was for days a free ordinary, where our men ate their fill, without money and without price not only, but with that hearty and cheerful welcome which so reanimates the weary. In his cellar he concealed three Union officers for three days while the town was in possession of the rebels—anxiously determined to save them from arrest and the Libby Prison. His wife fed them stealthily during that time. This generous man encountered Mr. WILKESON while searching for his son's body, and overcame him wholly with his tender outpouring of sympathy and offers of service. He subsequently sought him out and compelled him to come to his home and take food. The next day, as Mr. WILKESON was passing the Professor's door to an undertaker's, he placed his little son on the watch for him, and as Mr. W. returned he went out and tenderly forced him in, and showed him a room prepared for his use so long as he should stay in Gettysburgh, and then insisted upon his sitting down to a tea table generously and elegantly spread for him and five other strangers.

Squire SAMUEL DORNEKSEUR, living near Two Taverns, five miles east of Gettysburgh, for days fed scores of men and officers, including Gen. SLOCUM wounded; kept his wife and servants cooking constantly, and provided large amounts of food for the wounded, and for all this he refused compensation. He has a noble son in the army, who he would have thus done by. He came home to see his father, and that father blessed him as they parted, and said, "My son, I wish to save your life if I can; don't expose yourself to needless danger, but reflect credit upon your family—do your duty." And that son, now two years a soldier in the Reserves, does his duty.

In Maryland, I am happy to say, there were few cases of extortion. The contrast between the two States was marked. Articles of food were generally freely provided and sold at a very moderate price. The towns of Middletown, Taneytown, Liberty, Union Bridge and others, will long be remembered by our soldiers.

A few more incidents of the battle may be interesting here.

JOHN BURNS, a resident of Gettysburgh, about fifty years of age, took his own shot-gun and joined in the battle on Thursday, in defence of his home. He fought very bravely, as was shown by his receiving five wounds, some of them serious, however.

On the evening of the second day's fight, the rebels charged on Battery B, First Pennsylvania artillery. A rebel Lieutenant jumped over the works, and demanded of the Captain the surrender of the battery. The Captain responded, by knocking him down and taking 40 of his men prisoners.

The First New-Hampshire battery was located on a rise of ground, with a small grove of timber close in the rear. When the rebels were advancing across the open plain the men left their pieces, heavily shotted, and secreted themselves in the grove. The rebels perceiving this, surrounded the pieces deserted, and came on at a rapid rate. When within short range the men rejoined their pieces, and opened a terribly destructive fire upon them, which caused them to break and fall back precipitately, with large numbers killed and wounded. The Nineteenth Massachusetts, Col. DEVENS, took three stand of colors, the Fourteenth, Nineteenth and Fifty-third Virginia regiments. A portion of the battle field, the importance of which was immense, and the contest for which has not been fully described, was the extreme left flank, which the enemy endeavored to turn with so much desperation. When the Fifth corps was put into position, it, in fact, supported the Third corps, in part relieved it, and was extended out on the left, to lengthen our line, and checkmate the enemy's flanking attempts. AVERY's division was on the left of the Third corps, and the Third brigade of the First division, (then commanded by Gen. BARNES, the brigades of Col. VINCENT) was detached and sent to guard the extreme left flank. Here some of the most desperate fighting of the day occurred. Col. VINCENT, a brave and highly accomplished officer, was soon mortally wounded, and taken from the field. The command of the brigade then devolved upon Col. JAMES C. RICE, of the Forty-fourth New-York. The command had hardly gotten into position, and thrown out a heavy line of skirmishers, before two brigades of Texas and Alabama troops made a desperate charge against their position, with the purpose of passing between our line and the mountain (Wolf Hill) immediately on our flank. They made five or six desperate attempts to accomplish this purpose, pressing up to within fifty yards of the line of our gallant brigade, which fought with great desperation—slaughtering the enemy by hundreds. But Col. RICE saw the great importance of the position and determined to hold it—a determination in which that fire-proof brigade sustained him most gallantly. Not a man or officer was allowed to flinch; ammunition got low, but was quickly re-supplied; the struggle became more and more deadly; many officers were falling, when Col. RICE sent to Gen. SYKES for reinforcements, so that he could advance and take possession of the mountain, a third of a mile to the front beyond. Five regiments of CAUTWRIGHT's Reserves came under Col. FISHER. They were placed in a strong position and Col. RICE then ordered the Twentieth Maine, Col. CHAMBERLAIN, to advance and take possession of Wolf Hill, which he gallantly did, taking twenty-five prisoners, including several officers.

The brigade took, altogether, over three hundred prisoners, including two Colonels and fifteen commissioned officers, over four hundred stand of arms, saved all of our own dead and wounded and those of the enemy, and held at night his entire ground. One-third of the brigade was killed and wounded. Col. RICE's disposition of the troops in action, and his ordering the advance so that we retained our flank on the mountain, were highly praised by his superior officers. Fifty dead rebels were buried in front of the position of the Twentieth Maine and Forty-fourth New-York, and the Eighty-third Pennsylvania brought in nearly a hundred of the enemy's wounded.

This brigade has an old fighting reputation. And such commanders as RICE and COZZENS, of the Forty-fourth New-York, WESCOTT of the Sixteenth Michigan, CHAMBERLAIN, of the Twentieth Maine, and WEAVER, of the Eighty-third Pennsylvania, will nobly sustain it.

Great grief is expressed at the loss of Col. VINCENT, whom they all admired and recognized as an accomplished gentleman and gallant soldier. He was wounded in the groin, and though still living, is not expected to survive many hours.

THE DEATH OF COL. HUSTEN.

From the following dispatch to Sheriff LYNCH, we learn of the death of Col. HUSTEN, formerly of the Second regiment N. Y. S. M., and recently appointed Colonel of the Eighty-second regiment New-York Volunteers:

BALTIMORE, July 8, 1863.

Sheriff James Lynch, New-York:

Col. JOHN HUSTON, of the Eighty-second New-York Volunteers, late of the Second New-York State Militia, was killed yesterday in battle. The body will be forwarded. (Signed,) E. L. SPROUT,
A. Q. M., Gettysburgh.

Col. JOHN HUSTON, long known as an officer of the New-York State Militia, left this City with his regiment, May 1, 1861, as Captain of Company E; was promoted Lieutenant-Colonel, in which capacity he commanded the regiment at the battles of Fredericksburgh and Chancellorsville, and has since been commissioned by Gov. SEYMOUR as Colonel.

His energy and zeal in encouraging his regiment to stand firm against the repeated attacks of EWELL's corps, exposed him to the sharpshooters of the enemy, and he fell pierced by three shots at the head of his column, while giving his commands.

His noble regiment did not long survive him. It is reported that of three hundred and sixty-five, rank and file, but three officers and fifty-seven men remain of the Second New-York State Militia, (Eighty-second New-York Volunteers,) "the oldest Militia regiment in the State, and the first to volunteer for the war."

His bereaved widow and his numerous friends in this City, have the sympathy of their community in their irreparable loss. His remains are expected to arrive here this week.

WHERE GEN. REYNOLDS FELL.

Capt. W. H. WILCOX, Aid-de-Camp, of the late Gen. REYNOLDS' staff, says, in a card to the Philadelphia Inquirer:

"I notice in the papers very erroneous statements regarding the manner of Maj.-Gen. REYNOLDS' death—allow me to correct them. He was riding along the line of skirmishers, endeavoring to rally and urge forward some Western troops (of well-tested courage) who had broken from the terrible fire to which they were subjected, when he received the mortal wound which in fifteen minutes after deprived the army of one of its most gallant and able commanders. This was about 9½ in the morning, a short time after the action commenced, and not in the afternoon. The place of his death was about where the "College of Seminary is located, on the ridge, (this building was only about quarter of a mile out of town,) and not where marked as being on the side of the city opposite to the place of action. The First corps did not retire before the General died, but some two hours after. As I was the Aid who rode by his side at the time he was wounded, I am enabled to give you this briefly the facts."

OUR HARRISBURG CORRESPONDENCE.

The News from the Army of the Potomac—The Panic—Enormous Number of Deserters—Gen. Couch's Troops.

HARRISBURGH, Monday, July 6, 1863.

Everybody here is in high spirits at the glorious news from the Army of the Potomac. The telegraph has anticipated me of course, but it may be as well to say that confirmation of the best possible reports is hourly arriving. Wounded officers and citizens are arriving from Gettysburgh continually, and report everything favorably. The army is in splendid spirits at the great victory. This is the first time the Army of the Potomac has actually chased the army of Virginia, and seat it flying before them. I remember well what a soldier said to me after the battle of Chancellorsville. "I don't understand these victories," he remarked. "I only know that I have always been chased, and that I should like to do a little chasing myself now." Unless he is numbered among the fallen he has his ambition gratified. For the rebel army is in full retreat, and our forces fresh and inspirited by their victory, are rapidly following them. The South Mountain—a continuation of the same range that runs down into Maryland, spreads out between Carlisle and Chambersburgh into a series of rugged and almost impassable hills. There are three passes, one at the extreme east this side of Carlisle, which is not practicable for the rebels, both because it is far out of their line of retreat, and because it is secured by our troops under Gen. COUCH. The next pass is the Mount Holly pass. This is a mile or two long and very easily defended. I presume our troops are there also. They were on their way yesterday, but were temporarily detained by the rising of a small stream which carried away a bridge about five miles this side. This obstacle can easily be removed, and the belief here is that a sufficient force to hold the gap arrived there this morning. The third pass is at the south end of the mountain, directly on the road from Gettysburgh to Chambersburgh. We have no news from that point and it is entirely probable that the pass has been secured by LEE. I presume, however, that there is no doubt that our forces occupy Chambersburgh, for I know that orders have been issued to furnish all the telegraph offices between Carlisle and Chambersburgh, with operators, and the remnant of MILROY's force, which has been at Bedford and Bloody Run, has started for that place, and is said to have arrived there yesterday. The rebel army is evidently endeavoring to make its way to the Potomac at or near Williamsport, being ignorant of the destruction of their pontoon bridge at that point. The result of the whole thing seems to be that Lee's army is completely hemmed in, and every line of retreat cut off. There is no doubt, too, that it is greatly disorganized. I have mentioned before the large number of deserters who took advantage of being in a Free State to escape, even though the enemy was within reach, and considerable vigilance could easily be exercised by the guards and pickets, and I ventured to predict that after the first great battle, whether favorable or unfavorable to them, the rebel soldiers would desert by thousands. My prediction is verified. Thousands of rebel soldiers, separated from their commands, fill the mountains. Some have arms and some have none. Most of them are very ready to be taken. In fact, it is their only salvation from starvation. The root is, I verily believe, complete. Stragglers show which way the wind blows, and the hundred stories that are flying about of Lee's surrender, Lee's shooting himself, and all that sort of thing, would never be concocted unless there was some substantial foundation to rest them upon.

The great question, of course is, will there be another battle? It seems to me there must. MEADE must divide his forces in order to cut off Lee's retreat. He has already done so, in fact. There are many places on the line of retreat where a stand can be made, and it is hardly to be supposed that Lee is going to fall without a struggle. The desperation of some of the charges of the rebels on the last day of the battle exceeded anything in the history of the war. Some of them fell desperately to the wheels of our batteries. Certainly nothing has equaled this save, perhaps, the charges on our heavy batteries at Corinth, when the dead in front of the works was piled to the top with rebel dead. This battle was even more important to them than that, and if there is a possible chance of their retrieving themselves in the Valley of the Cumberland, even in the slightest degree, they will make an attempt to do so. The end is not yet.

The latest news to-night is encouraging. It will all be sent by telegraph. We must not place too much reliance on Couch's forces. They are not to be trusted in battle. Most of them were never in action, and all that can be expected of them is to hover on the flank of the rebels, capture stragglers, and, in event of another battle, compel the detachment of a considerable force to watch them. I am authorized to say that there are at least 20,000 militia now close to the rebels or doing efficient service in some other part of the theatre of war. I see by some of the New-York papers that Gen. MEADE is said to have remarked that if Couch was ready to attack at the right time his victory was certain. This and probable that Gen. MEADE said any such thing for he knows perfectly

THE SIEGE OF VICKSBURGH.

Affairs and Incidents Preceding the Surrender.

Movements of the Division of Gen. W. S. Smith—The Works at Snyder's Bluff—A Ride Around Vicksburgh—Incidents of the Siege—Arrival of the Ninth Corps, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SNYDER'S BLUFF, Friday, June 19, 1863.

At 7 o'clock on June 3, the First division, Sixteenth army corps, Brig.-Gen. WILLIAM S. SMITH, commanding, quitted the quay at Memphis, on board a number of transports, and set sail for the "Solid Pot of America." Two days afterward we reached the locality indicated by the date of my letter. This River of Lesser is some three hundred yards from bank to bank; is very deep, with rapid current, a yellowish, poisonous-looking water, and looks the very Lethean "River of Death" its name implies. It is easily navigated up to the mouth of the Sun-Flower, where, boatmen say, its course becomes very tortuous. Its banks are lined with cypress and cottonwood trees. A few inactive farms and several vacated cottages are visible along the shores. It abounds in fish of every description, and at all hours in the day anglers in "blue jackets" can be seen upon its banks. These predatory propensities have induced them to beat their arms into fish-hooks, get on the sick list, "call it half-a-day, and go fishing."

And they sometimes get their "full ration" of them. One fellow we saw to-day had one three feet long. At 11:30 we passed Sherman's old landing—Chickasaw Bayou—where there are a lot of the old blockading rafts.

THE REBELS ROUND VICKSBURGH.

The country in this immediate vicinity is most wild and picturesque. Stunted cottonwoods line the river banks, very much as they do those of the Tallahatchie—old fields covered with dead woods are to the right—high tablelands to the front, and a few old dingy cottages, and deserted negro huts along the river banks. Snyder's Bluff rises away to the right and front like a majestic mountain. Large basins of water, and a stretch of yellow hills or mounds are visible to the right, wagon roads dug through them, and leading away toward Chickasaw Bayou. An old tier of abutments filled with stones and blocking timbers, lashed together with chains and railroad iron, are here at the river's edge. Rifle-pits stretch along the hill-side from Snyder's Bluff, and far up the steep hillside from the darkened bastions of the enemy—the sodded embrasures and grass-grown parapets, strong by nature, made stronger by art, and manned by guns of heavier calibre than any we've seen this side the Potomac. Here it was, or rather on this line of defenses, four miles below, that Major-Gen. SHERMAN was so fearfully repulsed with the terrible loss of 1,500 men. And now that we have seen the works—built upon bluffs that no human being or animal ever could ascend without encountering a perfect abattis of trees, brush, briers, and grapevines so twisted together and pendant from precipices, as the mountain goat of the far West never scaled. In short, no army under any leader under Heaven could have climbed those fearfully steep under the appalling fire of 11-inch and 128-pound guns. The only wonder with me is that there are still such hearts in existence as Sherman and his army.

From Snyder's Bluff, by order of Gen. Smith, the transport steamed back to Snyder's Bluff and landed about 4 P. M., opposite the heaviest fortifications, and near the residence of Mr. SNYDER. By sunset the whole First division had landed and encamped. The house of Mr. SNYDER we found had been burned. Several heavy guns are here spiked, their carriages burned, and they hurled from the trunnions. One, the heaviest, is a eleven-inch columbiad. The works are most formidable—magazines all blown up, and the ground torn up generally.

I am indebted to Col. JOHN M. CORSE, commanding 26th Iowa Infantry, for the following interesting note, which is relevant. The St. Louis exiles, consisting of Mrs. and Miss THERESA POLK, Dr. GORDON, Major KAUFFER's families, et al., passed here the 18th instant, under flag of truce on the gunboat KENTUCK, from Admiral FOOTE to Satartia, in Yazoo county, Miss., 40 miles up the Yazoo river, and north of here. They were turned over to Col. FERGUSON's cavalry, who received them with open arms, and lots of love and kisses.

AN EXCELLENT SPEECH OF A SOLDIER TO SOLDIERS.

On the evening of the 17th Gen. WM. S. SMITH met the officers of the First division to meet him with their sidearms, at his headquarters, doubtless to have a tête-à-tête with them. Being in the camp of the 26th Iowa regiment at the time, your correspondent was politely invited by Adjt. ENNIS, of that regiment, to accompany the officers.

On our way to Gen. SMITH's headquarters we got lost, and when we arrived the General was delivering the peroration to a discourse on military affairs that all pronounced in saying was "the best thing they ever heard." After the General concluded his remarks, Lieut. Col. Cone, of the Sixth Iowa, stepped up to him and inquired if he would favor the officers of the Sixth Iowa with the main features of the speech he had just delivered, and the latter part only of which they had arrived in time to hear. "Certainly, certainly, gentlemen," he said, mounting a chair; "What part do you wish to hear?" "Give them that on discipline, and as much of it as you can," said Col. CONSE, who [illegible] the chairman. I am very sorry that I am unable to give you even an intelligible outline of the General's most excellent speech on picket duty, discipline, noise, fatigue parties, negro fighting, drilling, saving of rations, and indeed one whole situation and duties here. The contraband, of course, I cannot give you. We were to guard Gen. GRANT's rear—our right wheel, we will feel the first shock of the relieving army—right at the salient point. It is for us to stand the brunt of Gen. JOHNSTON's attack, for he will hardly assail Gen. GRANT's rear, and leave a large army on his flank to swing around and close upon him. We must do our duty, protect communications, should he seek to break them. We have every advantage of position—natural rifle-pits, gullies that may be scooped out, cleaned, and made complete concealments for the men, and in which skirmishers can fight, and hold a whole army in check till we are in battle line, and shifted to the several points of attack. Every officer will take pleasure in assisting in the safety of the army. We may fortify—make these hills here so impregnable that a rebel cannot scale them. We must admit no one through the lines. If they hitch to me me, I will go to the lines and talk with them. Every officer and soldier must consider himself on secret service, and look out for spies. Any soldier caught sleeping on picket, shall be shot, and therefore to continued shall be pardoned. I shall expect of every officer to command the most rigid discipline; that you drill your men in the heaviest exercises; that you let them know their duty, and how to do it; not by generalities, but tell them to do it; and if they hesitate, give them to understand that there is a power behind the officer in this army that will do it. Enjoin obedience in everything—it is the key to success. We are none of us free men. Military life is a pure despotism, unrelieved by a single ray of republicanism; all are subject to orders; even the highest is amenable for his acts to the President. If your men do not keep you out of action, they will not in action. The best fighting that has been done in this war has been done by the negro; and it is all owing to their implicit obedience. Their officers tell them what to do, and they do it. Look at Milliken's Band and Fort Hudson for the verification of my words. Those negroes who know not how to load their muskets, clubbed them, and drove the enemy hand to hand. And on the field [illegible] a negro and a rebel lying side by side, [illegible] the hand, each [illegible] the negro's [illegible] other—the first instance of the kind seen in the war. Look back a quarter of a century to the heroic deliverer of St. Domingo, and the name of Toussaint L'Ouverture will make your cheeks tremble at his power—one to MAHOMET, who for years kept the Christians at bay and wasted away the armies of Italy. Who were they at Marengo? And every disgraceful reverse to our war can be traced to a lack of obedience on the part of our officers and men. We must accumulate supplies here for any emergency. Try to get your men to live on two-third rations, and thereby every third day each man will have laid up one day's rations for future use. Jonnies may make us very hungry here yet. With his 200 rolling stock and 23 locomotives, he may make for Memphis, via Panola, to which point he can ship troops by rail, and thence march upon Memphis in less time than troops can be sent from Corinth to Gen. HOLLEY's relief. He is already crossing at Canton, and will, I am certain, try to relieve the Vicksburg garrison, by breaking our communications and cutting off our supplies at some point. Company officers must do their whole duty, and then we will have ten good companies, and the good company makes one good regiment. But I cannot do justice to this speech and must have true my report. Suffice it to say, that Gen. GRANT has pronounced Brig.-Gen. W. S. SMITH's picket lines the most perfect here. No one can pass them but with a staff officer. The pass system, he thinks, is calculated to let in spies. A pass signed by Maj.-Gen. GRANT himself is treated with contempt. A gold dollar had swearing to does by members of Gen. GRANT's Staff, who think they should not be subjected to such stringent regulations. The following illustrates the perfect vigilance that prevails here on the picket lines: A party of scouts in the secret service of Gen. SMITH, under command of a sergeant of the Seventieth Ohio, approached the lines on the main Vicksburgh road, and where there was a bridge. They were halted, and a pass from Gen. SMITH—but Lieut. WILSON, of the Ninetieth Illinois, in command of the post, would not let them in. After much persuasion and protesting that they were Gen. SMITH's scouts, the sergeant, with well-feigned severity, said: "Lieutenant, I have an idea, you fool; I have a right to go in there, and I now give you timely warning that I am going in. Parade your men." In an instant the guards were in line, bayonets fixed, pieces cocked, and had that squad ventured on the bridge, death would have been their portion. "All right," said the sergeant, "I have orders to try you in this way. You'll do." And your correspondent can likewise bear testimony to the vigilance and fidelity of the men on outpost duty here—for he, with Sergt.-Maj. CRAGG, of the Sixth Ohio, were kept standing in a pelting rain-storm for two long hours, waiting for a staff officer to pass them in. But of the doings of the First division, and the many meritorious soldierly qualities of its most estimable commander and staff, in my next letter. We must say a word about Vicksburgh and the "situation."

A RIDE TO VICKSBURGH.

At 11 o'clock on the 14th inst., your correspondent, solitary and alone, left Snyder's Bluff, and started for Vicksburgh, eleven miles distant. En route we passed the plantation of Mr. BEARD, near to Yazoo River, three miles south of Snyder's Bluff, and eight from Vicksburgh. The farm lying at the foot of the bluffs that stretch away in every direction, and of a most fertile soil, is covered with corn waist high, in tassel, and "silking out." BEARD is away in Alabama, having gone there before the investment of Vicksburgh, carrying with him sixty or seventy of his negroes. He holds a Colonel's commission in the Confederate army—is Secretary of War's division. His lady and family are still on the farm. Near here we cross Clear Creek and Jim Lewis' Branch, crystal streams, with rocky beds. Some one has seen here ten feet in diameter, and one hundred and fifty feet in circumference. The country and scenery from Snyder's Bluff to Chickasaw Bayou are most picturesque and beautiful. Near the latter place we encounter the pickets of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Illinois regiment, Col. R. M. ELDRIDGE, commanding. All visitors to Vicksburgh traveling this road are taken to his headquarters, and if they have not a "reasonable excuse" for being away from their commands, are put in the "guard-house." Near his headquarters, and close by, is a beautiful creek, in the hospital of the Fifteenth army corps, in charge of Surgeon MCDERMOT. There are now but 105 patients in it—all in fine condition. On a high hill far our left, between here and Sherman's landing, is one of our Signal corps. Opposite the landing, and east, I think, we come upon a field covered with sutlers' tents, wagons, ambulances, &c. Newsmongers go crying about "Late Northern papers" at 15 centes piece. Grassy negroes, in blue jackets, are ogling dear Dishas as they waddle by in mauve bent merino and shaker bonnet. This is the "post of the Chickasaw," and is commanded, I think, by Col. JOHN CONROY SMITH, of Maj.-Gen. SHERMAN's Staff. At this place are some few springs, whose clear and limpid waters leap in perpetual gurgles from the rocky sides of the surrounding bluffs. Tumbling, clear and cool, from the deep gorges of the rock-ribbed earth into little rocky basins in shady jungles, they make most desirable bathing places. Winding around high hills, over creeks and bridges, through groves and sand-banks, we come upon the headquarters of Maj.-Gen. W. T. SHERMAN, situate on a high hill and in a shaddy grove, four miles from Vicksburgh. The General is seated in his tent, and, with Brig.-Gen. W. S. SMITH is intently gazing upon a map. He does not look as he used to; the wrinkles seem deeper upon his face, his mien is more stern, and whole contour more careworn.

There is no man in the army in whom a deeper interest is felt than in Gen. SHERMAN. There is not one who has enthroned himself in warmer regard and more intense affection in the popular mind. Though occupying place of the highest trust, every duty of which was discharged with scrupulous fidelity, and an ability that challenged admiration, he is less known than those who have won far less distinction. Already is his name a tower of strength to his soldiers. His presence everywhere animates and revives the men. The General's staff has been broken; none greeted us that we were wont to see, except Major TAYLOR. Capt. R. M. SAWYER is A. A. General, and seems very much of a gentleman. He "could tell us nothing that was not contraband."

VARIOUS EXCITING ADVENTURES.

We met here Capt. —— of Gen. HOVEY's staff. He had just returned from the "front." While sitting under a large tree, near the works, an 11-inch shell exploded in the top, hurling the branches in every direction, one falling on his horse and causing an "American citizen of African descent," who was holding the "critter," to show the "whites of his eyes," and get up and scramble for clear life. Leaving here, we move on two miles, past some camps, a camp of the pioneer "Corps d'Afrique," filled with fractious contrabands and galled, till we come to Capt. GRANT's headquarters, located in a lovely grove, back of WILLIS' plantation—three miles from Vicksburgh. On this plantation is Gen. BLAIR's hospital—a kind of depot hospital, through which all the sick and wounded of the division pass. It is in charge of Surgeon LOMBIX, of the Sixth Missouri regiment. There are now in the hospital but 400 patients, all in good condition. The Ward-master here tells that Major A. J. GENERESS, of the Fourth Virginia, reported killed, is alive and in Vicksburgh. At this place we fell in with the gentlemanly aide of the Sixth Iowa, Lieut. BLAKELY, who proposed a ride to Gen. LOGAN's headquarters—the centre of the works. We gladly accepted the invitation, and in company with the lively sister, started direct for Vicksburgh. Passing several beautiful plantations, covered with corn, and near the headquarters of Major-Gen. MCPHERSON, about 3 P. M., we arrived at the "White House," on Jackson's chaussée, or the Yankee Road, one and a half miles southwest, and in full view of the Court-house in Vicksburgh. The country hereabouts, as indeed everywhere in the immediate rear of Vicksburgh, is nothing but one interminable series of swells, sandy hills, or mounds, dotted with lovely groves and elegant plantations, mostly in fine cultivation. These mounds, almost straight up and down, and of a compact, sandy soil, are furrowed and covered with corn, knee-high. The hollows are deep and wide, with excellent causeways, bubbling springs, fragrant groves, and what is more, they are literally filled with "Yankees." No troops of consequence are visible until you get into these hollows—more properly valleys or plains—and groves, in which, concealed from the enemy's view, are the tents, equipage, &c., of a powerful army. From there you enter the "White House" and centre fort, half a mile distant, by ascending a long slope, by the main Jackson road, cut through sandbanks, and which, near the "White House," merges into a large sap or ditch, 10 feet wide, and deep enough to admit a horseman from the fire of the enemy, not sixty yards distant. As we rode up the slope, and past our artillery, a little to our left flank, it was making the very earth tremble with the reverberations of its rapid and heavy discharges, in answer to, and now and then eliciting a stray shell from the enemy's guns. Arriving at the "White House," we met in a little dell, where a half-dozen balls come singing around our heads. "You'd better get down here, unless you wish to fall with perforated eye of the soldiers, very coolly. We "obeyed orders" immediately. Your correspondent was conducted to the upper story of the "White House" by a very polite and courteous Captain of the Forty-fifth Illinois—Hiram U. Bozra—whence Vicksburgh and surroundings could plainly be seen with the naked eye, sleeping quietly in the hazy distance. The Court-house, a little modern building—their hospital, seemingly a large brick seminary, with its crimson colors streaming in the wind; lawns, with mules and horses grazing upon them; pretty groves, men and animals moving hither and thither; all, all could be plainly distinguished with the naked eye. And their numerous earthworks stretching away to the right and left with their mighty bastions looming upon the high ground, looked like some ancient relics. It was a sight we'll never shall forget. The enemy's artillery opened very suddenly and savagely on our artillery, and many of their shells coming in rather uncomfortably proximity, the Captain frankly told us that we'd better leave, for he could see the rebels getting ready "to give us thunder." We had not gone half a mile, when the enemy's artillery opened up a terrible fire, hurling heavy shell in every side. Just as we were descending a slight declivity of the road, half a mile from the "White House," a bomb burst in air near over, and not fifty feet above, our devoted heads. It had begun to fall, and had it continued an instant longer, my companion and your correspondent would have been blown sky high. We felt very much obliged to the chap who cut that fuse.

On the 15th inst., yesterday, in company with Sergt.-Maj. CRAGG, Sixth Iowa, I made a second visit to the "White House," and also went as far around on the left as the railroad bridge, four miles east of Vicksburgh. While at the "White House" we visited the "Central Fort," main approach by the Jackson Road, which, at one point, is within a mile of the Court House in Vicksburgh, and which is flanked from the enemy's bastions, called "Big Black Fort" and "Center Fort." It is held by the First brigade, Third division, Seventeenth army corps, WARRINER's celebrated "Lead Mine regiment," Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteers, occupying the extreme front, with headquarters at "White House," on SHIRLEY's plantation, one and a quarter miles southwest of Vicksburgh Court House. This First brigade is composed of the Twentieth, Thirteenth, One Hundred and Twenty-fourth, Forty-fifth Illinois, and Twenty-second Indiana, and is commanded by Brig.-Gen. LAUMAN, former Colonel of the Seventy-ninth Ohio regiment. This brave brigade charged the Fort of the enemy on the 22d of May, and with heavy loss; the Forty-fifth and Twentieth Illinois succeeded in getting under and within twenty feet of the main Fort and bastion of the enemy, where they remained all night, heaping the bloody down behind his works by sharpshooters, the guns of the combatants almost touching. Several officers of this regiment furnished us with much valuable information.

BRISK FIRING AND COURTESY FIRING.

The "White House" is elegantly furnished with carpet, chairs, sofas, a fine library and all the fixtures of a first-class "establishment." It is the property of Mr. SHIRLEY, who professes to be a "good Union man." It is literally riddled from "turret to foundation stone," by the balls of the enemy. It is so close to the enemy's works that every shot from their guns, if well directed, will hit. Several soldiers have been shot here. Capt. BOZRA tells us that not a day passes but a man is killed or wounded in this place, either by shell or sharpshooters. One had his head shot off to-day by a shell. Gen. GRANT, I understand, has said that around the whole line the average loss in one day is five killed. The casualties are principally in the new regiments, and are occasioned by the carelessness of the men. The troops in the centre have constructed large saps, one of which extends up to within twenty feet of the bastion, and in still going, the men roll up bales of cotton for protection old cotton bales and sap-rollers. On either side of this are bomb caps, stretching away in zigzag lines, within twenty-five yards of, and parallel with the enemy's earthworks, which are very formidable, and rest on a high ridge, between which and the natural works there is a deep and broad gully covered with logs, brush, stumps, and every other possible border. It seems to be the intention, when these saps are extended up to the very front, to blow them all up simultaneously. A fight seems to be looked for every hour, as our men are getting so close, when they know, as they expect, they will attempt to drive us from them. It is most interesting and exciting to witness the effect of our artillery firing here. The moment a rebel gun opens, a dozen Dahlgren heavy howitzers or rumbling siege pieces reply, and almost invariably silence it forthwith. One to-day, at this point, was blown by one of our heavy shot six feet above the rebel works. The musketry firing is constant, and at times sounds for miles along the line, as if a real battle was in progress. Our men, as have the rebels, have planted upon the ridges mounted rifles in them, upon the works, and from behind and through them they shoot. The moment either party "darkens the hole," up comes a ball, often lodging in the bank, as often in the leg, and sometimes in the poor soldier's cranium. And the moment the smoke from the rebel gun is seen, a dozen Yankee rifles are turned upon and fired at it. Then the rebels fire at our smoke, and so it goes—both sides desperately wasting a great deal of ammunition. The enemy recently has fired more than his wont, both of artillery and small arms; likely, realizing that he must soon surrender, he thinks it a "good thing" to exhaust his ammunition on us first. Our men are lying in these sandy caps, their guns stuck up, and blankets spread over them, sweating, reading and swearing about the heat. There is no chance whatever for them, and the heat at times, is almost insupportable. The enemy frequently throw shell over by hand into the caps, and our boys boys pick them up and send them back before they burst. This is a very common occurrence, and shows what contempt of danger men have, who have been lying under the guns and fire of the enemy so long.

A GLIMPSE INSIDE OF VICKSBURGH.

To-day the enemy rolled a 60-pound shell over the bastion, and toward our sap-roller, but it missed its mark, rolled into the deep gully, and, for some cause, did not burst. It is estimated that our artillery have thrown already against the city 25,000 tons of iron. I have this from Gen. SMITH, who ought to be in a position to ascertain the facts, if they can be ascertained. If the enemy have a foundry here they might collect and recast them, and thereby save their church-bells, which will be in great requisition in this country when the war is over. By the aid of a "powerful glass," and from the right angle, you can see large narrows and excavations made in the interior of the enemy's bastions, and soldiers, greasy and dirty-looking, seeking shelter in them from our shells. We have observed a mule and ambulance emerging from one of the "holes." Men can be seen moving to and fro, and seemingly busy at work at something—doubtless erecting new fortifications. Occasionally, when a shell from our side is thrown in their works, men and ambulances can be seen hurrying to the smoke and place of explosion. Horses, cattle, mules, &c., can be seen away in the distance, quietly feeding upon the ledges and grassy lowlands. The citizens are living in the burrows in the earth. From what we can see, hear and imagine, we are led to the conclusion: That Vicksburgh is to-day a greater stronghold than Sebastopol ever was, and that though its capture is merely a question of time, it will be a longer time than most men think before it capitulates. Among our reasons for so thinking are these: Engineer LOCKERMAN—who planned and built the works around Vicksburgh immediately after the evacuation of Corinth, and just one year and a day previous to its investment by Gen. GRANT—in a conversation with Gen. SHERMAN, under flag of truce, and in reply to an inquiry of the General's, as to whether they "Expected to complete an investment of the City as Gen. GRANT had made," replied: "Oh, yes, we expected just such an investment when we pondered the world over a year ago." Now, we take it that, if they expected just such an investment as we have made, it is reasonable to suppose that they made provision for the contingency by hoarding in supplies of food, ammunition, &c., &c. Secondly—When Gen. GRANT ordered out the non-combatants, would not PEMBERTON have sent them had he been in any strait for the wherewithal with which to feed them? Third—The long and absolute quiet in our rear, would it continue were the Vicksburgh garrison in great extremity? Fourth—Would not the mules, horses and stock of every kind that we now see on the plantations at Vicksburgh, have been turned out and they nothing to feed them? And would not, were the garrison about starving, every mule, cow and calf killed by our shell, be nicely cleaned and salted away for future use, instead of being allowed to die and rot in this summer's sun? And is it not possible and highly probable, that in the unobstructed six miles of river in front of Vicksburgh, the one-gunboat fleet has enough to partially ration his army for a time?

A portion of Maj.-Gen. WADSWORTH's body guard, of the Second Wisconsin cavalry, while out foraging three miles from here yesterday, came upon and captured nine deserters from JOHNSTON's army. They report REGIMENTS at Jackson with 45,000 men and more coming! JOHNSTON seems here in that neck-o-woods, with a heavy force, not stated. On the person of one man was found a copy of the Memphis—Grenada—Jackson—Meridian—Mechanicville—Satartia Appeal; it was dated June 1, and is printed on wall paper!!! The deserters belong to the Sixth Kentucky, and say their whole regiment would desert if it could. JOHNSTON's officers treat are "fearfully demoralized," and tell their men to go where they like. They have seen nothing but "corn-dodger" and "bull-beef" for the last fifteen months, and "don't care a tom-up whether Mosby kills the d——l, or the d——l kills Mosby." They are well dressed, in the regular Confederate gray. None in JOHNSTON's army but the extremists—the "fire-eaters"—from Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, &c., are reported of Vicksburgh. These say that some of these days JOHNSTON will move upon us—the Vicksburgh garrison will move out from their works, and they will "give it to us on all sides."

A portion of the old Potomac army arrived here yesterday. As the boats touched the shore, some ungrateful "secesh" said: "Go up-town, Yankees, stop here; we can do this little job; we don't want any 'yankees' here." He had forgotten the glorious deeds of the old Ninth army corps at Antietam. It is "currently reported, and generally believed" here, that the New Hampshire boys literally whittled the boats all to pieces!

Citizens are coming in constantly and taking the oath. They say that what provisions have been hidden from the rebels are free to us. Deserters are coming in daily from Vicksburgh. Five came in yesterday. They say that they have been living on half rations ever since GRANT came, and that since then they had been relieved the jeadie in the regiment in each inside every day, that the garrison had given 7 ounces for a week in which to march, the white flag, and if at the end of that time no aid came, they would; then our shell, in process of exploding great damage, and the Third Louisiana regiment had lost all but one hundred of its men. General SHERMAN received a dispatch yesterday from Admiral FOOTE, stating that a colonel, a captain and five or six lieutenants had escaped from Vicksburgh in a skiff, and that the colonel had been captured, and he hoped to catch his companions.

General W. S. SMITH, Maj. STEWART, Ninetieth Illinois, and Maj. CONWELL, are to-day engaged in unlimbering, raising and placing in position the heavy columns of the enemy, at this point. They are [illegible] with soft lime, and Maj. STEWART is alone capable of some of them. They are very heavy, and no doubt see the navy guns secured to the rebels at Norfolk. To-morrow they propose opening the ball of [illegible] in which time [illegible] I could [illegible] the [illegible] over a dozen [illegible] to-day that he is doing all that any other could do, and that he has found a field in which to exercise his rare genius, and put in practice what, when a boy, he learned at West Point academy. The whole army is in splendid spirits and [illegible]

Conversation Between the Working Parties and Pickets of the Sieges.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SNYDER'S BLUFF, MISS., ANTHONY'S LANDING, and the RIVER OPPOSITE, Friday, June 26, 1863.

At 12 o'clock Sunday, the 21st inst., I left Snyder's Bluff and started upon a stroll of Vicksburgh.

Three miles south of Snyder's Bluff, we came upon the beautiful plantation of Barton BEARD, embracing fifteen of 15,000 acres, and what were once plantations of Cantons and Rosedale. All the negroes have been carried to Alabama and Georgia, except fourteen who are still on the farm, and thirty-five that got on Gen. PEMBERTON's hands here last Winter. They are now employed up and down the river—some in the army, some steamboat cooks, and some in Memphis.

Pursuing the Ridge Road, we gain the "Walnut Hills, which extend along the river for about [illegible] miles. They rise to the height of near five hundred feet, and display the finest scenery on the Lower Mississippi. They are under a state of high cultivation, which renders them very attractive in their superior [illegible]. All along the road troops are on the move, [illegible] the [illegible] are being [illegible] the [illegible] and everything indicates an early attack.

CONVERSATION WITH THE REBEL SOLDIERS.

Passing on for the night to the camp of the Eighth Iowa, we visit the works in front of Gen. E. O. C. ORD's brigade, and where was planted the Second Iowa battery, consisting of six guns and two 20-pounder Parrotts—Capt. Nelson Y. SPOON, Chief of Artillery on Gen. TURNER's Staff, First Lieut. J. E. RAMS, commanding battery. They are just getting the Parrotts in position to enfilade traverses the enemy are creeping in rear of a distant bastion. Lieut. E. HANSCOMB, Thirteenth Ohio, Aid-de-Camp of Brig.-Gen. H. B. EWING, who commands the pickets at this point, conducted us up the saps to within five feet of the rebel soldiers. "There," said he, pointing to our boys reclining against a large gabion, "do you see our boys leaning against that gabion? Well, about five feet from them, and leaning against the opposite side, are the rebels!" By running the gauntlet of rebel lead that fell recklessly all around us, we succeeded in reaching the spot pointed out. Our men—some of the Fourth Virginia—had laid aside their guns, and seized a weapon more powerful than the sword, as also had the rebs, and which earth, judging from the billets sent and recent, was wielding with his greatest dexterity. We introduced the exercises with the following: "How is rations?"—tied the telegram to a bullet and tossed it over the bank. In a moment we received the following:

"We have plenty of rations. Throw over some United States crackers and we will throw some biscuits! (Signed) P. A. S.

We replied: "Here's the 'hard tack'—throw us the biscuit. We have sent bread twice a day, Boston and United States crackers for dinner, a pleasant place, and wish you'd come over and share the luxuries with us"—fastened it to the cracker and threw it over the bank. We received the following in reply:

"I would not hesitate a moment to come, but in so doing I would be exposed to the fire of your sharpshooters. I would like to come over and have a chat with you. We do not shoot at your pickets. One of our pickets was wounded last night by one of your men." P. A. S.

The biscuit didn't come. We then proposed to trade knives, and, as the sequel will show, completely "bluffed" "P. A. S."

"Throw over your knife and let us see it. We will send it back if it does not suit. We will not send an inferior one—P. A. S." The knife was thrown over, but lodged on the bank. Some of the boys hallooed, and told them that there was a knife on the bank, and that if they'd crawl up and get it, they would not shoot. After a while they got it, and we received the following:

"I send back the knife. We just found it. It is worth more than any that we have. Address your notes and packages P. A. S."

We then sent him a cigar, and a series of questions in regard to the situation is and about the "Sebastopol of America," and received for reply the following:

"I cannot answer the questions which you ask. Much obliged for the cigar. Did not get the cracker. Plenty of grub.—P. A. S."

When he learned that we were reporters, he seemed very anxious to exchange papers, and sent the following: "Will you be kind enough to throw us over a paper, and this evening we will throw over one in return.—P. A. S."

We told him that we'd be glad to comply with his request, but that there was an embargo against it.

REBEL THOUGHTS IN WRITINGS.

The following are but a specimen of the thousand-and-one billets written and received at this point. I append them verbatim et literatim, et punctuacion, and in the rather original orthography with which beautiful science the writers seem to be familiar.

"You need not be afr'd of us, for we will not shoot you, if you don't shoot us. This is hard to set and watch men to kill them. I youst to live in Indiana up the white river. 'Lived their loo years,' this is D. Norris, Co. K. 27 My Vol." Another, written on pasteboard: "Say boys, hear is one of our Reg't. that wants to swap canteens with the 47 ohio. What Regt. is on picket over there? Is there a boy named JEREMY BUCKLY over there?—M. A. E." And another addressed to Co. D, Forty-seventh Ohio Volunteers infantry: "I do not know any one of that name. Do any of you wish to trade Canteens? If you do, let me know. If you wish to encourage us to come over, throw over a canteen. We will not shoot.—Lt. J. D. 27 Lu." Their canteens, unlike ours, are altogether wooden, and they seem very anxious to exchange. The canteen was thrown over, and that signal twelve rebels "came over" at that place, and delivered themselves up as prisoners, stating that they were already prisoners, they did not care to be received and treated as such—that anything was preferable to starvation. Desertions are very frequent from the rebel line. It is reported that as high as 124 in one night came over the works near Gen. GRANT's division on the left, with guns, knapsacks, and everything. "P. A. S.," spoken of above, a Lieutenant in the Twenty-seventh Louisiana regiment, last night, per agreement with Lieut. HAMMERTON, that he should be allowed to return, came over the works, and they conversed together for some time. He would divulge nothing of interest—spoke rather despondingly of Vicksburgh—thought it possible that the entire garrison would spend the Summer North; had nothing against us—was fighting for principle, and would desert, but for the disgrace of the thing. Lieut. BAKER, Co. C, Twenty-sixth Iowa, also met and conversed with Acting Adjutant GRIFFIN, Thirteenth Louisiana regiment, who came over the works, and remained an hour and a half. He considered the Vicksburgh garrison already as good as prisoners, but thought it should, when it should surrender, can. Grant to make the transfers, enjoy the trip North exceedingly. They had not heard of the evacuation at Vicksburgh, and authorized to repeal a charge and there saving it for that purpose. There were a great many sick, both of soldiers and citizens in Vicksburgh. They were short of medical stores, and most of their wounded—even the slightly wounded—were suffering and dying from inattention. He wanted to know what SHERMAN was wounded at Port Hudson. Said that our heavy cannonading last Saturday, killed but one man that he knew of, and he was falling with an unexploded shell, when it burst and blew him into stoms. Represents the army as seriously demoralized, as hostile to PEMBERTON, and says it is no generalship to hold their present works. Expected to live in the South, or he'd desert—did not want to have it thrown up to him, yet if we were pleased to keep him, he'd stay—he could make them believe that he was forced to remain, but that would be a disgrace to us, as we had promised that he should return. The merchants in Vicksburgh had opened their stores, and turned over all the flour, tobacco, &c., to the authorities, who had issued it to the soldiers. The Lieutenant thought it would soon be confiscated anyhow, and their corn meal was almost exhausted. They have "a good-head," a very strong indication of an immediate capitulation. A lady was shot close to one her houses in the outer works, while returning, and when one mile from our pickets, had her arm shattered by a shot from our sharpshooters. He put on a very long face when Lieut. BAKER told him that Jeff. JOHNSON had been badly whipped. He is "little mad" and will hope. The citizens have served out great corvees under the supervision of engineers, have made them shell-proof, furnished and ventilated them, and many are in the under ground that, should the city surrender, it would be a week ere they learned it. Their corn-fields are likewise, and from the mouths of their burrows, which have been constructed for a river attack, operate upon the wounded under shady trees. Very often in the act of amputating a leg, or extracting a ball, the operators, who seem to be endowed with all the instincts of the "prairie dog," hearing the buzzing of a shell, quit their work, abandon their subject to the storm, and send for their rations. The men do their cooking in dishes.

This evening three of their bands came out near the works and played several stirring airs. Our boys wanted them to play "Yankee Doodle," but they wouldn't play it—that had "played out." They played "Dixie" and retired.

P. A. S. AGAIN.

To-day the inevitable "P. A. S." made out and sent over to Lieut. HAMMERTON the following:

"SPECIAL REQUISITION.

For 1 box Sardines, 2 pounds Cheese, 1 paper of fine King Tobacco, and 1 bottle of Whisky."

The Lieutenant immediately procured and sent over all the articles required the last, "which he would have been happy, exceedingly happy, to have sent at so, had it not been that he was so far from his whisky base that it was impossible at all times to procure a supply of the article named." In return, he received an elegant gold pencil worth $5. To one of our mining parties, who are within hailing distance of the enemy, the rebel pickets sent the following dispatch:

"Work quiet boys—Keep your heads low; notwithstanding we'll shoot high, yet keep your heads low; and do not talk—for if our big officers hear you, they will make us shoot you!"

The recent armistice here was one of the most affecting scenes I ever witnessed. Soldiers who, in self-defence, had sought a few hours before to slay each other, greeted each other as old friends—brothers, long separated, shook hands and conversed of childhood's sunny years; fathers met their children in arms against them, and wept that it was so. One little fellow of the Twenty-third Indiana found his brother, seized his sword to his rear, and he never returned. Ah! could the poor private soldiers settle this battle, the war would, indeed, soon be over.

REBEL REPARTEE.

As my letter is mostly made up of incidents, we will give you a few more, going to show the richness of rebel repartee and facundity of Federal fun:

Rebel Picket—What are you men doing over there?

Union Picket—Guarding about 20,000 or 30,000 rebels in and about Vicksburgh. Guarding your army as prisoners, and making you board yourselves.

Reb.—Why, you —— fools, PEMBERTON has a strong line of guards for the same purpose.

Reb.—How's HOOKER? He had to recross the river, did he not?

Fed.—Yes, but he was not so big a fool as your General was. He did not burn the bridges before his men all got across!

Reb.—What do you think of the gunboat Chickasaw?

Fed.—Gunboat? Why, don't you know the difference between a gunboat and a hay-rack?

Reb.—(just in the act of throwing a hand-grenade)—Ants'y, over!

Fed.—(in the act of hurling it back)—Look out for the skillets and camp-kettles!

Fed.—(addressing a rebel Lieutenant of artillery)—Where's your gun?

Reb.—Turned it over to GRANT at the Big Black, and I guess its now in active service, by the way it plays into these works!

Reb.—Why don't you come and take Vicksburgh?

Fed.—Oh, we're in no particular hurry. Gen. GRANT is not yet ready to transfer you North.

Reb.—(boastingly)—We've got a lot of your —— old flags over here.

Fed.—Have you, though? You'd better make shirts of 'em, for they'd look better in that butternut.

Reb.—(in a husky voice)—I want to trade some corn-meal for some coffee.

Fed.—What did you say?

Reb.—(louder)—Won't you trade some coffee for some corn-meal?

Fed.—You'd better get some coffee, or something else, for you've eat corn-meal till you can't talk plain.

Reb.—When are you going to make a charge?

Fed.—Oh, in about two years. We are in no hurry—we living five over here—have a pleasant place, and ammunition to last us the rest of the time.

PLAYING OFF.

The following are but two of the many methods of "playing off," so prevalent in the army. One man, just before the battle of the 22d May, here, very desirous of being sent to the hospital, and, as he was very hearty, he managed to humbug the surgeon by swallowing tobacco juice just as the medical functionary was making his calls, and of course the man was very sick, vomiting at a sad rate. This he repeated, until the Surgeon was satisfied he was very sick, and sent off to the North or to the hospital. He was sent, and got to remain until after the battle, by similar experiments. Another young man had a falling of strength in the seat of arterial circulation. His expedient was this—having his shoes off, he cut one of his feet severely with a penknife, then made a corresponding cut, as he thought, in one of his shoes. His case was brought immediately before the surgeon at the hospital. The wounded man claimed to be shot. The surgeon examined the wound, and, as this excited suspicion, then the shoe, when lo! and behold! the right foot was wounded, and the left shoe. The examination of the penknife soon disclosed the whole plot. It is needless to say that the heedless victim of his own folly was laden with reproaches instead of commiserations. JUNIUS.

INCIDENTS OF THE SEIGE.

Correspondence of the St. Louis Democrat.

REAR OF VICKSBURGH, Monday, June 29, and CAIRO, Friday, July 3.

Last night the rebels kept up a heavy firing all night with artillery and musketry. Volleys of musketry were continually fired at our working parties in the trenches. No special damage was done.

Cap

near the corner of Willoughby and Raymond streets, yesterday afternoon. The engine ran 68 feet, and the members take pride in them. The steamers present were Brooklyn, No 17; Constitution, No. 7; Continental, No. 6, and Neptune, No. 5. No. 6 threw six of a 1½-nozzle, and threw a stream 194 feet; No. 5, with a 1¼-nozzle, threw 190 feet; No. 17 threw a stream 208 feet through a 1¼-inch nozzle, and No. 7 threw 218 feet through a 1¼-inch nozzle. On the return home Niagara Hose Company, No. 11, entertained No. 2 at their house on Court-street. This evening Niagara Company will entertain their friends, and ladies are especially invited, everything having been arranged for their accommodation.

THE BALTIMORE POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—Judge GARRISON granted an alias attachment on Tuesday in the arrest of Col. Marcus Ruggles, commandant of Fort Hamilton and Fort Lafayette, and the writ has been placed in the hands of Sheriff CAMPBELL for service. Last Summer the Police Commissioners of the City of Baltimore were confined in Fort Lafayette by order of the General Government. A writ of habeas corpus was applied for, but in consequence of the peculiar state of affairs at that time the Sheriff was unable to execute the writ; a similar attachment for contempt was issued against Col. RUGGLES, but the Sheriff was unable to serve it, being denied access to the fort. A new attachment has now been applied for and granted by Judge GARRISON. It has been given to the Sheriff, but no return has yet been made, and none is expected until some time to-day.

KINGS COUNTY COURT OF SESSIONS.—The July term of the Court of Sessions was commenced Tuesday morning, when the following gentlemen were impanneled as Grand Jurors: JOHN J. VANDERBILT, foreman, George E. Brown, Benjamin Price, Eugene Ferris, Henry Dimon, John T. Mills, Wm. H. Burr, Samuel H. Vernon, Chas. F. Disbe, George Merritt, J. E. Robinson, John T. Baily, D. Myers, Jacob Brombucker, John G. Barnes, E. C. Longthorne, Michael Slevin, George N. Bergen and Samuel W. Burroughs. Judge GARDINER charged the Jury in the usual topics, and they retired to deliberate. Several persons were arrested for various offenses, and pleaded not guilty, and Sprague Bezerville was placed on trial on the charge of grand larceny, in stealing some manner from Mr. Dancrey, of Williamsburgh. The case had not been concluded at the rising of the Court.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF EDUCATION.—The Board met Tuesday, the President, C. P. Sims, Esq., in the Chair. A communication in relation to the teacher of Colored School No. 1, received a month ago, was brought up, and the Committee on the subject reported in favor of reorganizing the school, with a resolution to that effect, which was adopted. The present teacher is a colored man, and it appears that the parents of the pupils desire a white man as teacher. The present teacher is a competent man, and has had charge of the school for many years. The matter will probably be decided at the next meeting. A resolution was adopted in the effect that the vacation of the schools commence on the 24th of July, and reopen on the 8th of September. After some usual routine business, the Board adjourned.

BURGLARY.—The apartments of Mrs. CHARLES W. FULLER, No. 183 Fulton-avenue, were feloniously entered on Tuesday afternoon, and five silk dresses, $10 in gold, a breast-pin and some bills were stolen. A young woman, aged about 19 years, was seen coming from the rooms with a bundle. Mrs. FULLER was absent at the time inquiring about the fate of her husband, who is a Sergeant in the Fourth regiment New-York cavalry, and engaged in the battle of Gettysburgh. The value of the property taken is about $250.

MURDER TRIAL.—MICHAEL KENNY was tried for the murder of JOHN RESSEGUIE, in the Kings County Court of Oyer and Terminer, this week. The accused stabbed the deceased with a butcher-knife, and killed him almost instantly, in a grocery-store, corner of Albany and Fulton avenues. The evidence was plain, but the jury were in doubt whether it was murder or manslaughter, and therefore could not agree upon a verdict. They were locked up until this morning.

COAL FOR THE COUNTRY.—The Superintendents of the Poor have made a contract with Mr. CHARLES KELSEY to supply coal for the institutions at $15 per ton. The amount of coal required is about 2,500 tons per year.

LAW REPORTS.

Important Sewing-Machine Decision—Interesting to Patentees.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

Before Judge Nelson.

Orlando Potter and Nathaniel Wheeler, The Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Company and the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Company vs. Courtland P. Dixon and Edward Learned.—June 26, 1863.

NELSON, C. J.—The bill is filed in this case to set aside a patent (or so much of it as conflicts with the plaintiffs) issued by the Commissioner of Patents to J. G. Wilson in pursuance of an order by Judge Dunlop made on appeal Dec. 20, 1862, and for an injunction, pending the suit, against the sale or use of said patent.

The order of Judge Dunlop was made under the following circumstances: J. G. Wilson, assignee of a patent to Akin & Feithousen in 1859, applied to the Commissioner for a reissue of the patent; upon which an interference was declared with a patent previously issued to I. M. Singer, and after a hearing of the issue between the parties, the Commissioner decided in favor of Singer, whereupon an appeal was taken by Wilson from the decision to Judge Dunlop, who upon a review of the case reversed the decision, and ordered a patent to the applicant, J. G. Wilson, on the 20th June, 1860.

After the return of the order and papers to the patent-office, and before the issuing of any patent, parties interested in a patent previously granted to A. B. Wilson applied to the office to declare an interference between this patent and that of Akin & Feithousen, which was done accordingly, and after hearing, the Commissioner decided in favor of the application on the ground that A. B. Wilson was the first original inventor, whereupon an appeal was taken in Judge Dunlop, who held that the interference between the patents of A. & F. and A. B. W. was wrongfully declared, and should be dissolved on the ground that no second interference could be declared under the statute, and that his decision upon the interference between the patents of A. & F. and I. M. S. was conclusive upon the Commissioner, and thereupon peremptorily ordered the re-issue of the patent in pursuance of his first order, and refused to look into the case on its merits.

The seventh section of the act of 1839 provides, that on an application for a patent, if the Commissioner shall be satisfied that the applicant is the first original inventor, he shall be entitled to a patent. That if upon the application the Commissioner shall refuse the patent, the applicant may appeal to the Board of Examiners provided for in the act, which Board has power to reverse the decision of the Commissioner, and if reversed, and on a certificate of the fact, "he shall be governed thereby on the further proceedings to be had on such application."

The eighth section provides, that when an application shall be made to the Commissioner for a patent which in his opinion would interfere with any unexpired patent which had been previously granted, it shall be his duty to give notice to the applicants or patentees, and, if either party shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the Commissioner, he may appeal from such decision on like terms as in the preceding section, and like proceedings shall be had to determine which, if either, of the parties are entitled to the patent. The eleventh section of the act of 24 March, 1836, substitutes the Chief Justice of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Columbia, for the Board of Examiners, and special provision is made for a full hearing before him, and on the return of the papers and his decision to the office, it shall be entered of record, "and the decision so certified shall govern the further proceedings of the Commissioner in such case."

The sixteenth section of the act of 1836 provides that when there shall be two interfering patents, any person interested in any such patent may have a remedy by bill in equity, and the Court, having cognizance thereof, may adjudge and declare either of the patents void in whole or in part, or inoperative and invalid in any particular part of the United States.

The motion for a preliminary injunction in this case is placed on two grounds: 1. That the Commissioner had no authority to receive the surrender of the patent to Akin & Feithousen, and reissue one to A. G. Wilson, inasmuch as the order of Judge Dunlop was a nullity; and, 2. If otherwise, the reissue was erroneous, as A. B. Wilson was the first and original inventor.

I. By the 8th section of the act of 1836, already referred to, it is made the duty of the Commissioner, on an application for a patent which in his opinion would interfere with a patent already granted, to give notice to the parties interested, receive proofs, and determine the question of priority of invention, and the party against whom he decides may appeal to the Chief Justice, &c. It is supposed by the learned Chief Justice that there can be but one interference declared by the Commissioner under this section on an application for a patent, and that his decision is conclusive upon this officer, though, in the meantime, and before the patent issues, another case of interference should appear or be presented. There is certainly nothing in the statute limiting the power of the Commissioner in this respect, and the reason for the hearing in the second case is as strong as that for the first. The object of this provision is one that pervades the whole of the statute, namely, to secure to the real inventor the exclusive privileges therein provided for. Besides, a hearing and decision between the applicant for a patent and A., and whichever form of the case or the other, furnish no rule for a decision between the applicant and B. in the case of an interference subsequently declared. The proceedings are inter-partes and inter alios. The effect would be to open in the decision of Judge Dunlop would not be limited if the proceedings had taken place in a suit at law or equity, much less should it be allowed, where they are informal and summary with a view to the truth and merits of the case.

The section is broad and unqualified—"That whenever an application shall be made for a patent, which in the opinion of the Commissioner would interfere with any unexpired patent, &c., it shall be the duty of the Commissioner to give notice, &c."

How the Commissioner is to obtain information of the interfering patents is not provided for in the statute, and hence the matter is necessarily left in his discretion, and he is left to obtain it in the best way he can. If the party interested may know of the application he can bring the interference to his notice; and if the Commissioner happens to recollect the issuing of the patent of the previous patent, he may act upon that information. It would be very unreasonable to require him to recollect all the previous patents at the time that might interfere with the one applied for, or to require the party interested to know that an application was pending in the office for a patent interfering with his.

The interference declared, which appears in this case, between the patents of Akin & Feithousen and of I. M. Singer, presented simply an issue between these two patents, and nothing more; and the proof did not necessarily, or might not, have extended beyond this issue. The decision of the Chief Justice in favor of the former was doubtless binding on the Commissioner as between these parties, but no further. The eleventh section of the act of 1839 does not provide that the Commissioner shall issue a patent to the applicant if the decision of the Chief Justice be in his favor, but simply declares that it shall "govern the further proceedings of the Commissioner in the case." Such notice should be given to respective parties concerned, but not so to other parties who may come in and claim the benefit of the provision.

We are quite clear, therefore, that the learned Chief Justice erred in refusing to entertain the appeal in the case of the interference declared with the A. B. Wilson patent, and that his order in the Commissioner directing the interference, and directing his order in the case of the interference with the I. M. Singer patent to be executed, was a nullity, and hence the patent to J. G. Wilson by the Commissioner was without authority and void, and should be enjoined.

2. Even if the question in the case turned upon the merits, namely, whether or not the invention of A. B. Wilson was prior to that of Akin & Feithousen, I should have felt bound to interfere, and enjoin the patent; for in several cases before me on a final hearing, decided in August, 1861, involving the question of priority, and in which J. G. Wilson was one of the defendants, I came to a clear conviction upon the proofs against the claim of A. & F. The decision has been generally acquiesced in, and the invention gone into very general and extensive use, as appears in the papers in this case.

It may be proper to refer to the 5th section of the act of 3d March, 1837, which confers on the Commissioner the same power on a re-issue, over the question of granting it, which he possessed in the case of an original application for a patent.

It was argued on this motion by the learned counsel for the defendants, that the 8th section of the act of 1836, amended by the 16th section of the act of 1839, did not authorize this Court to grant an injunction, and that the power was confined to the specific remedy pointed out in the section. We do not assent to this view. It has been frequently decided that the power conferred upon the United States Circuit Court to entertain bills in equity, in controversies arising under the Patent act, is a general equity power, and carries with it all the incidents belonging to that species of jurisdiction. The power conferred not only enables the Court to decree a final remedy, but to take care that the subject of the controversy shall not be rendered valueless pending the litigation.

Let an injunction issue, according to prayer of the bill.

For complainant, Mr. Gifford and Mr. Stoughton.

For respondents, Messrs. Blatchford, Seward & Griswold and Mr. Brady.

Desertion from the Navy, and a Discharge on a Habeas Corpus.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Barnard.

In re., the Application of Sam. F. Perry.—Some time since Samuel F. Perry, a minor, went, without the consent of his parents, and enlisted in the navy at the Washington Station. Not feeling satisfied with his mode of life, he deserted, and was subsequently apprehended in this City. His father, Samuel G. Perry, a gentleman of respectability and standing in this City, now claims the custody of his son, and the ground taken by his counsel was that the boy must be discharged, for the reason that the act of Congress passed March 2, 1837, has not been repealed; it provided that "it shall be lawful to enlist boys for the navy with the consent of their parents or guardians, not being under 13 nor over 15 years of age. The prisoner was discharged.

A. H. Reavy for prisoner; John Kelly for Government.

An Action for an Assault and Battery—Almost a Mutiny.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge Alker.

Allen McDonald vs. Capt. Bartlett, of the ship Ellen Sears.—This was a civil suit, brought to recover $500 damages for an alleged assault and battery and false imprisonment. The defence set up was, that the plaintiff was guilty of mutinous and disorderly conduct while on board the vessel, and of repeated acts of disobedience to orders, and that no more force was used than was necessary and proper to compel obedience to such orders, suppress such mutinous and disorderly conduct, and to protect the vessel and those on board from the consequences.

It appeared on the trial that the second day out at 8 o'clock in the morning the Captain gave an order to tack ship, that the plaintiff, who is a seaman, complained then that he could not do more than one thing at once, whereupon the Captain repeated his order, and the plaintiff positively refused to obey. The Captain then caught hold of him to enforce his order, when the plaintiff struck him in the face with his fist, causing his nose to bleed profusely. A clinch between the parties ensued. Finally, however, the Captain succeeded in getting the plaintiff into the forward house on deck. Previous to this, it appears that the mate was prevented from separating the Captain and the plaintiff by one of the crew, who insisted that he should not interfere. The Captain then went aft, but on his return, found that the plaintiff had escaped from where he had been confined. He then procured a belaying-pin, and finally found the plaintiff in the forecastle, and insisted on his surrendering himself. The plaintiff replied that he would knock his brains out first, and at the same time raising a belaying-pin. The Captain thereupon struck at the plaintiff but missed his aim. The plaintiff then struck the Captain on the temple with the pin, jumped past him and rushed aft brandishing the belaying pin and calling to the crew to "come on." At this junction some of the passengers, two of whom were owners of the vessel, came to the assistance of the Captain, one of them being armed with a carbine not loaded. They pursued the plaintiff, who was finally overpowered, and by direction of the Captain his hands were tied and he was confined under hatches for the remainder of the voyage. Upon his arrival here he commenced this suit. The cause has occupied two days in trial. At the conclusion the Judge dismissed the complaint and rendered judgment for the defendant, with an allowance of $10 and costs.

C. F. Wettemore for plaintiff; Elbridge T. Gerry for defendant.

WEDNESDAY, July 8—P. M.

The excitement in the Markets for Gold and Exchange and Stocks is quite equal to yesterday's report. The course of prices on the Stock Exchange is very irregular, and the views of speculators singularly contradictory on the Railway Share list. The sellers for the decline act upon the theory that Stocks must go down with Gold Coin, which is 2 ⅌ cent. lower to-day. The buyers for the advance, on the contrary, upon the belief that a prosperous traffic on the Roads, and an easy market for Money, superinduced by good news from our Armies, will not only maintain prices, but stimulate speculation for a further upward movement. The result, to-day, of these conflicting opinions, is a feverish and uncertain market, so far as the speculative Stocks are concerned. There is an advance of 4 ⅌ cent. on Hudson, and 2 ⅌ cent. on Harlem, and a fall of 1@2 ⅌ cent. on nearly all other Roads. The Federal and State Securities are steady.

The first National Bank of the City of New-York, duly organized under the recent National Banking Law of the United States, will go into operation at No. 2½ Wall-street in a few days, with a capital to begin with of $200,000. The Directors are the Messrs. THOMPSON, of THOMPSON BROTHERS, and Messrs. GEORGE M. SNOW, (of the New-York Tribune,) GEORGE F. BAKER, (late of the Bank Department in Albany,) and CHARLES BLANCHARD. Mr. JAMES GUERNSEY, late Cashier of Tenth-st. Bank, is to be the Cashier of the Bank, and SAMUEL C. THOMPSON, the President.

The net business of the Hudson River Road, for eight months of the current fiscal year, we understand to have been made up to a point. The figures show an extraordinary improvement in the traffic and management of the line. They are about as follows:

Gross traffic eight months, from 1st October, 1862, to 31st May, 1863	$2,677,000
Expenses of operating	1,148,000
Net earnings	$1,524,000
Eight months interest on debt	450,000
Increase on $4,400,000 Stock	$1,114,000
Equivalent to 25 ⅌ cent. for the eight months.
The increased traffic of the 8 months over last season is	$766,858
At an increased expense of only	96,574
Gain on net income	$670,284

The New-York Stock Exchange Board this morning voted a donation of five thousand dollars to the United States Sanitary Commission for the relief of the wounded and disabled soldiers of the National Army. The disposition was general among the members of the Exchange to vote double the sum, had the present condition of their treasury authorized it.

We learn that Mr. WILLIAM H. FOGG, of the mercantile firm of FOGG BROTHERS, Burlingslip, has been made President of the Park Bank, and Mr. JAMES L. WORTH, late first Teller, has been made Cashier, in place of Messrs. R. W. HOWES and CHARLES A. MACY, who go out of administration on the 15th inst. The rumor is that Messrs. HOWES and MACY will soon organize a National Banking Association in this City, with a large capital.

The day's business at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States was as follows: Receipts, $2,398,278 50, including for Customs, $150,000; Payments, $2,237,229 46; Balance, $24,606,832 14.

The Niagara Fire Insurance Company have declared a semi-annual dividend of 5 ⅌ cent., payable on demand.

Mr. JNO. HOENER, Telegraph Office, No. 145 Broadway, will pay the New-York Stockholders of the Western Union Telegraph Company their regular quarterly dividend of 3½ ⅌ cent., on and after July 10.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Telegrams from Harrisburgh give reports that the main body of LEE's army was yesterday between South Mountain and Hagerstown, and it was thought that LEE would select some place between Hagerstown and the Potomac at which to give Gen. MEADE battle, as there was apparently no hope of his being able to cross the Potomac with his army without the certainty of an attack. The rise in the Potomac amounts to a freshet, which is likely to continue for at least a week, and even if the rebels had pontoons, it is a question whether they could make them available. Meantime our troops are concentrating from all points against the rebel army, and there is reason to believe that the case of LEE is desperate, if not entirely hopeless. There is no confirmation of the report by way of Harrisburgh, published yesterday, that a battle had already commenced near Williamsport. It probably grew out of the operations of our cavalry, who are continually harassing the enemy, picking up prisoners, and destroying the rebel transportation. The enemy's wounded are abandoned all along the route of their retreat.

Our telegrams from Frederick, to 12 o'clock yesterday, confirm the supposition that LEE's main force was between Hagerstown and Williamsport. On Tuesday our cavalry completely enveloped the enemy, and harassed him on front, flanks and rear. It was ascertained yesterday that LEE had thrown out a corps of infantry toward Boonsboro, forming a line from Funkstown on the left, to Falling Waters on the right—thus commanding the Hagerstown and Sharpsburgh, and the Boonsboro and Williamsport turnpikes. This looks like a determination on the part of LEE to risk another battle.

Our correspondent with Gen. KILPATRICK's cavalry, writing from South Mountain, Md., states that, on the 4th inst., that command captured the whole of Gen. EWELL's wagon train, extending four miles, and strongly guarded by infantry and cavalry. Between 1,500 and 2,000 prisoners were also captured, including about 200 officers, and some 1,000 horses and mules.

Brig.-Gen. JONES, a rebel cavalry officer, and nearly a thousand other rebel prisoners arrived in Baltimore yesterday, having been captured by our cavalry under Gen. KILPATRICK. The entire number of prisoners captured is not yet known, but it must be somewhere in the vicinity of fifteen thousand.

From the returns made up to Tuesday by the burial parties on the field of Gettysburgh, it is judged that the total number of rebels killed on Thursday and Friday cannot fall short of 3,500. Those killed on Wednesday were buried by their friends, and this additional cannot at present be ascertained. Our total losses in the three days—killed, wounded and missing—will approximate 17,000, according to semi-official count. The total losses of the rebels will reach a figure much above this.

Capt. BYERSON, of the Thirteenth New-Jersey regiment, who reached his home at Newark yesterday morning, says that before he left his regiment Gen. MEADE made an address to the army, in which he states that the rebel loss was thirty-five thousand. Gen. MEADE has captured in all sixty pieces of artillery.

The Baltimore American of Tuesday evening says that every available man is going to the front to reinforce Gen. MEADE, and aid him in the pursuit of the retreating rebel army. On Monday a number of the regiments stationed in that vicinity broke camp, and left for the Army of the Potomac.

Gen. GRANT, in his official report to the War Department, dated 10 o'clock on the morning of the 4th, states that the rebels surrendered on that morning, and that the troops were paroled as prisoners of war. Gen. GRANT also gives details of his proposed movements, which cannot at present be made public. His first move, however, will undoubtedly be for Port Hudson, unless Gen. BANKS shall have, in the meantime, finished the work so efficiently begun by him.

Some details of the surrender of Vicksburgh, which have reached us, place the number of prisoners secured at 18,000, of which about 12,500 are effective fighting men. The immediate cause of the surrender was the exhaustion of supplies and the failure of Joe JOHNSTON to relieve the garrison.

Gov. SEYMOUR received the following dispatch on Tuesday:

WASHINGTON, July 7, 1863.

Governor of New-York:

Vicksburgh surrendered to the United States forces on the 4th of July, and Gen. GRANT is now in possession. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

There was a rumor in Memphis, on July 3, that Gen. BANKS had been defeated at Port Hudson by Gen. JOHNSTON, and that he was severely wounded and a prisoner at Columbus, Miss. As Richmond papers of July 4 make no allusion to such an event, it is plain that the report was altogether unfounded.

We announced in our edition yesterday that a heavy force of rebels, under HOLMES and PRICE, made an attack upon Gen. FRANKLIN' force, at Helena, on the 4th inst., and were disastrously repulsed. Gen. HURLBUT, in his official report, states that the rebels probably numbered 9,000. The attack lasted from daylight until 6 o'clock P. M., when the rebels were repulsed at all points, leaving 1,200 prisoners in our hands, and with a loss of from five to six hundred killed and wounded, while our loss was but sixty.

It is understood that 300,000 troops are to be called for immediately under the Enrollment act.

GENERAL NEWS.

The New-York Seventh Regiment was at Frederick, Md., on Tuesday last.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education, last evening, the resolution passed at the meeting of the Board on the 1st inst., directing the President not to sign warrants for teachers' salaries until the Trustees of the Ninth Ward restored Miss McGEAR, whom they dismissed from School No. 16, on account of incumbrancing, was rescinded.

The officers of the Belt Railroad announced to the Mayor yesterday, that the cars on their route, on the north side of the town, are running. Idlers have been taken out.

The Toronto Globe states that in all the neighboring lake counties the insects are making great ravages among the wheat. The crop on the ground appears to be so large that it is probable the average yield will still be satisfactory; but the sample will be greatly injured.

A train on the Avon, Genesee and Mount Morris Railroad, consisting of a locomotive, tender, baggage and passenger car, fell through the bridge over the Canaseraga Creek on Tuesday. Mr. RICHARD P. FITZHUGH, a well-known citizen of Mount Morris, was killed, and several other passengers, of whom there were fortunately few on the train, were injured more or less seriously.

The body of Col. BRYAN, One Hundred and Forty-third New-York Volunteers, arrived yesterday, and was taken in charge by the Committee on National Affairs.

The editor of the Baltimore American says he has heard from a respectable ear witness, that Gen. HOOKER, in his parting address to his officers here, said "that the Army of the Potomac fought with the rebels two hours out of the twenty-four, and with the Government at Washington the other twenty-two."

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, before Judge McCUNN, WILLIAM HICKS pleaded guilty to grand larceny, and JAMES KEEFE to larceny from the person. They were both remanded for sentence. RICHARD MEAD and FREDERICK LALOR pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree, and were sent to the House of Refuge. No cases being ready for trial, the Court adjourned to this morning.

The price of Gold further declined ¾ ▼ cent, yesterday; making the fall since Monday morning full 1¾ ▼ cent. Exchange is down to 148 ▼ cent. Money easy at 6@7 ▼ cent. Stocks very unsettled; the Railways generally lower than on Tuesday. The sales of Government 6 ▼ cents of 1882 amounted to $863,100.

General business was quite spiritless yesterday. Breadstuffs were decidedly lower, yet of Corn only were the sales large. Cotton neglected. Groceries, Oils, Metals, Fruit, Seeds, and Naval Stores were inactive. Pork, Hay and Salt were in fair request. Other articles were very quiet. There were 642 vessels of all classes in port.

Foreign Intervention Again.

The Tribune renews its advocacy of Foreign Intervention in our affairs. It sees no reason why we should not accept the good offices of France, if NAPOLEON sees fit to tender them, and welcome his aid in restoring peace with the rebels. It counsels great circumspection as to the terms of such a negotiation, and holds out the idea that Foreign Powers ought to urge the rebels to lay down their arms. If they choose to give such advice, of course we can have no objection. But this does not need our assent. LOUIS NAPOLEON, if he sees fit, can advise the rebels to stop the war at any moment he may choose. He is said to be in constant and close communication with the rebel emissaries in Europe, and cannot lack opportunities to make his wishes known to the rebel Government. He does not need our consent for any such proceeding as this.

But this is not the object of the intervention which he proposes. He does not intend to give any such advice. He does not intend to aid in the restoration of the Union. On the contrary, he has made up his mind that the destruction of the Union will be for the benefit of France; and he proposes to end the war in the interest of the Southern Confederacy. He has conquered Mexico, and he does not intend that the United States shall again become powerful enough to deprive him of that possession. We may talk as we like of the good will of foreign Powers—their sympathy with us—their hatred of Slavery and their desire to see the Union restored; the whole thing is moonshine. There is not a Government in Europe that would not rejoice to see our Union destroyed. Nations are essentially and necessarily selfish; they never rejoice in each others' prosperity, and still less can those Governments, resting on privilege as their foundation, regard with anything but dread and hatred the growing power of a Republic based on human rights. They care nothing for Slavery, they care nothing for the rights of established governments. They see in us a gigantic rival, threatening their supremacy, dividing their commerce, menacing the stability of their thrones by the constant stimulus it affords to the hopes and aspirations of the millions of their people. They would one and all rejoice at our overthrow; and anything which they can do to accomplish this object, without subjecting themselves to the penalties of direct interference, they will most certainly undertake. We may just as well look this matter squarely in the face and prepare to meet it, as to delude ourselves from month to month with false expectations of foreign sympathy and foreign aid.

What conceivable good result, does the Tribune imagine, could possibly follow an acceptance on our part of Foreign Intervention? Is France to prescribe terms to which both parties must assent? Are we to start with the concession of Southern independence, or is the South to return to the Union, with or without fresh guarantees for their real or their fancied rights? In either case we see no necessity for the intervention of any foreign Power. If the South wishes to surrender, she does not need the aid of France. If we propose to concede Southern independence, we can do it without foreign assistance. There is no possible good to be accomplished by foreign intervention in any form, or under any possible pretext; while there is no end to the embarrassments and complications that might follow our assent to the interference of France, or England, or Spain, or all combined. Unquestionably they have an interest in the speedy cessation of the war; but that interest does not compare for a moment with our interest in the restoration of the Union, and the permanent maintenance of the integrity and supremacy of our Republican Government.

If the rebels are ready to propose terms of peace, let us hear them. We can now afford to treat them with courtesy, and even with as much of magnanimity as may consist with justice and the permanent welfare of the country. Indeed, if our arms shall be crowned with the signal victories which seem to be hovering over our banner, we can very well afford to open the door for such negotiations as the rebels may be prepared to offer. We would have no needless obstacles placed in the way of peace, provided the rebels are prepared for such a peace as is alone consistent with the integrity of the Union, and the permanent and unquestioned supremacy of the Constitution. But let this be a matter wholly and exclusively between them and us. Let us have no intermeddling of foreign Powers with the adjustment of our affairs. We do not wish to be intoxicated by any foreign nation for the preservation of our Union, and we cannot surrender it upon the combined demand of all the nations on the face of the earth.

The Moral Results of the Late Triumphs.

What a prodigious purification of the atmosphere within one brief week! How much easier every loyal man breathes! How much quicker every factionist hears! How much clearer every traitor sees! Last week the air was thick with forebodings, repinings, mutterings, revilings, cursings, threatenings—every thing north of Mason and Dixon's seemed to be turning into "a foul and pestilent congregation of vapors." The weak sank despairing, and even the stoutest felt burdened. It was the baleful, lurid gloom before the Midsummer storm. All this now has passed. We are having the serenest time that has been known since the war began. There is a general sense of relief, which every malignant, much as it irks him, can't help heeding. There is no longer a possibility of keeping up the old deceptions. The passions, and prejudices, and fears, and sordid motives, which but just now were so easily stirred into the wildest play are now beyond the reach of even the craftiest demagogue. A genuine public spirit, like some fresh breeze, now rules the hour.

It was only about one short month ago that the great Democratic Peace Convention in this City, under the auspices of FERNANDO WOOD, issued an address to the people declaring, among other presumptuous things, that "the war was the curse of the age in which we live"—that "the hand of God is uplifted against us"—and that "the war cannot succeed; we have been beaten; we cannot conquer the South." The Cooper Institute was crowded inside and outside with men who greeted with acclamations these sentiments, as expressed in resolutions and enforced in harangues from six different platforms. To-day FERNANDO WOOD himself—and in saying this we say everything, for there is not a more brazen piece of humanity in this City than he—would not dare to repeat the first syllable of that talk. Foolhardy as he is, he would never venture, in the light of this day, to affront the Almighty with the imputation that He has deserted the cause of Truth and Justice; or to abuse the people by publishing to the world, in their name, the craven acknowledgment that "we have been beaten." And the wretched herd that then surrounded him, impatient to cast off, with him, every lingering trace of American manhood, would to-day sooner cast themselves into the sea, than again return to that scene of degradation. The events of the last few days have wrought a most marvelous change in their spirit—or at least in their outward demeanor. They are beginning to understand how thoroughly despicable they made themselves; and are now willing to practice some little self-restraint for the sake of public decency.

Again, it was but just now when the peculiar admirers of Gen. McCLELLAN were maintaining their incessant clamor that the salvation of the country depended on his restoration to the chief command. They racked the English language for epithets expressive of his transcendent merits as a warrior. Of this "skimble-skamble stuff" it seemed there would be no end. Had it spent itself simply on Gen. McCLELLAN himself, it might have been borne complacently enough. Great allowance must be made for a party in such a desperate strait for an available leader. And besides, there was not the slightest danger that a majority of the American people, in the face of last year's history, could be brought to believe that this most backward and most timid of all living Generals, was the fit man to intrust the fortunes of the Republic to in the day when there was a chance for its overwhelming triumph, and a complete deliverance from its enemies. The annoying part of this obtrusion of what were called the claims of Gen. McCLELLAN, was the persistent averment that the Army of the Potomac would never fight with heart under any other leader. There was no scruple to put this indignity upon that glorious body of soldiers, because, forsooth, it was imagined that something might be made from it for the interest of the dismissed General. Whether the majority of these soldiers, at any time since the disastrous Chickahominy campaign, have preferred Gen. McCLELLAN as their leader, we cannot say. But this one thing we know: it was a most atrocious libel to assert, as the political adherents of that General did, that the spirit and courage of the Army of the Potomac depended upon his presence and lead. That army is made up of no such weaklings. They require to be braced up by no man. They get their inspiration from no leader, but from the cause; and all that they have ever asked was an opportunity to meet its enemies on a fair field, and to be allowed to fight out and follow up their own victories. The boundless impudence of this pretence, that the Army of the Potomac could not and would not fight under any other chief than Gen. McCLELLAN, was long ago denounced, as it deserved to be, in these columns. It was still persisted in, but has now got its quietus forever in the battle of Gettysburgh. No battle, since human war began, ever tested the heart of an army more severely, or with a more triumphant result. It is conceded on all hands that never did the Army of the Potomac do such splendid fighting as under the untried and almost unknown General, appointed but a day or two previous. McCLELLAN, in his palmiest day, never beheld such valor or endurance; it may be doubted, in fact, whether he ever conceived it possible. Were not the memory of it so fresh, it could scarcely be credited that there were knaves audacious enough to assert, and dupes silly enough to believe, that the Army of the Potomac depended on GEORGE B. McCLELLAN for its fighting esprit. The imposture had no small run, but it has now had its day.

The late events will have quite as potent an effect in purging the disloyalty of the Southern rebels as of the Northern malcontents. Doubtless some of the more discerning of the Secessionists have for some time suspected that their enterprise was bound to end in failure. But the rebel mind generally has entertained no such idea. There has been an almost universal assumption that the independence of the Confederacy was sure of being established, sooner or later. It will now be no longer possible to rest in any such delusion. There is no resisting the premonitions of such stern facts. There will soon be a remarkable change in the rebel mood. What complexion it may take, or to what action it may prompt, we cannot yet venture to conjecture. But that new aspects and new results of great significance are at hand, no one can doubt. The time has passed for any further efforts of charlatanry of any sort, Northern or Southern, to rule the public mind, or shape the situation. Events alone are sovereign now.

The Armies East and West.

We have later news this morning, both from Vicksburgh and from Maryland. There is no doubt now of the surrender of the great rebel stronghold on the Mississippi River. The garrison capitulated on the Fourth of July, after a consultation between Gens. GRANT and PEMBERTON, and the arrangement of terms on the 3d. GRANT told the rebel officer that the only terms which he could entertain were those of unconditional surrender—thus confirming his title gained at Fort Donelson, of "Unconditional Surrender" GRANT. But, in consideration of the bravery the garrison had displayed, Gen. GRANT paroled the soldiers in Vicksburgh, and furnished them rations to carry them beyond our lines. The number of prisoners is 18,000, of whom two-thirds are in fighting condition. The immediate cause of surrender was exhaustion of supplies and of ammunition, and it is said that all we have heard concerning the suffering of the rebels in Vicksburgh has been but half the truth.

The information from LEE's army places his main force on the rapid passage from Hagerstown to Williamsport, and indicates that our cavalry have enveloped him, and harass him on front, flanks and rear. He is struggling to cross the Potomac, but in case that fails, he is preparing for resistance near the old Antietam battle-ground. Gen. MEADE is manœuvering his forces, largely reinforced, so that he may be able at the proper moment to strike the final blow.

Rebel Prisoners.

Our military correspondent at Frederick cautions the public against estimating too highly the results of the late battle, and then says that the number of prisoners captured is twelve thousand. To these may be added two thousand captured by our cavalry at South Mountain, and mentioned by another of our correspondents. This makes altogether 14,000 prisoners from the battle of last week.

We have two dispatches from Vicksburgh—one of which says that the number of prisoners taken there is 18,000, of which 12,000 are now in fighting condition, and the estimate in the other dispatch is not far wide of this.

At the fight at Helena, Ark., on the 4th of July, our forces took 1,200 rebel prisoners; and, from dispatches, we judge that ROSECRANS last week took at least a couple of thousand in Southern Tennessee.

This makes altogether over thirty-six thousand rebel prisoners which we took in the first four or five days of the month of July.

We suspect that to these, within a few days, will be added the garrison at Port Hudson. Altogether, last week was one to be long remembered by the rebels and by us.

Effect of Our Victories Abroad.

It is impossible for us, in the rejoicing over the two terrible blows which the rebellion has just received, not to think of the effect which they will produce abroad. It will be all the more noticeable because just now the talk of intervention is actively renewed. The rebel envoys are active, their sympathizers are bold, the Court declines to convict the Alexandra, the correspondents talk about the intervention purpose of Louis NAPOLEON, and dilate upon his interview with SLIDELL, while MASON boldly announces the programme of the rebels. Right into the midst of all this scheming and apparent success of the rebel emissaries will come the news of the defeat of Lee and the fall of Vicksburgh like a thunderbolt cleaving the ground beneath their feet.

It is remarkable to see how often during the progress of the struggle the scenes have been changed in this same way. Just as certainly as the talk of intervention grew loud, just so sure was something or other to rise and check it all. If events here took what our enemies thought was a favorable turn, before they could build anything substantial upon it, a change would sweep it all away. If POPE was discomfited at the second Bull Run, LEE was beaten at Antietam. If the vociferations of the Peace men among us led the London Times to hope that they would be enabled "to bring the Federal authorities to their senses," then half a dozen State elections must show that the country was for war to the last, and the rebels must kick the Peace men so foully as to disgrace them before the eyes of the world. And now, again, when the recent disgraceful Peace demonstration in this City, and FERNANDO WOOD'S visit to Washington upon the heels of it, were encouraging our foreign foes more than anything that had happened, there must come the invasion of Pennsylvania, with its threats, on the part of the rebels, to fire the coal fields, and paralyze Northern industry at a blow, and its discreditable displays, on the part of the Copperheads, of lack of patriotism, disgusting even to the rebels. And that this should be followed by so speedy a rout of LEE by Gen. MEADE, and the capture of Vicksburgh by Gen. GRANT, whose position the Times considered as "growing every day more critical;" really it will be hard for them to bear, and we shall not be surprised if the news shall be followed by some unseemly displays on the part of our enemies across the water.

It will be likely to check any new offer of intervention, unless, indeed, it shall have been made before the news arrives.

Rights of Patentees—A Singular Case.

We publish in our legal columns this morning a decision by Judge NELSON, in the United States Circuit Court, which presents one of the most curious legal imbroglios that has occurred in our Courts. It arises under the Patent laws, which have been so fruitful in great litigations, and is one of the phases of the sewing-machine controversy. A brief statement of the matter will not be uninteresting. The contest is between the owners of the Singer, the Grover & Baker, and the Wheeler & Wilson sewing-machines, on one side, and one J. G. WILSON, who is the assignee of an old patent issued to ARIES & FELTHOUSEN, on the other. This patent has been before the Courts frequently, in sewing-machine controversies, and Judge NELSON himself, in 1860, decided that as between their patent and that issued to A. B. WILSON, on which the Grover & Baker and Wheeler & Wilson companies rest their claim, the invention of A. B. WILSON was prior. The assignee of ARIES & FELTHOUSEN, however, did not rest satisfied with that decision. He applied to the Commissioner of Patents for a reissue to him of the Aries & Felthousen patent. The owner of the Singer patent thereupon claimed that there was an interference between this patent and his own. The parties had a hearing before the Commissioner, who decided in favor of SINGER, and refused to issue the patent applied for. J. G. WILSON still was not satisfied with this decision against him, but appealed to Judge DUNLOP, sitting in the United States Circuit Court at Washington, and the Judge, after hearing the parties, reversed the decision of the Commissioner, and ordered the reissued patent to be made out to J. G. WILSON. The owners of the A. B. Wilson patent thereupon stepped in, declaring that this proposed reissue at any rate interfered with theirs. These parties were heard before the Commissioner, who again decided against J. G. WILSON, and declined to make the reissue for which he applied. Another appeal was taken by J. G. WILSON to Judge DUNLOP from this decision. The Judge decided—and this is a curious point in the case—not that the Commissioner was wrong in his decision on the merits between these parties; not that there was no interference between these two patents, but that on the former hearing in the controversy between J. G. WILSON and SINGER, he had ordered the patent to be reissued to J. G. WILSON, and that that order must be obeyed, whether there was any interference between it and any other patent or not; deciding, in fact, that there could be but one hearing in reference to the interference of a patent with any and all others. He thereupon again directed the Commissioner to make out the reissue to J. G. WILSON, and this order the Commissioner obeyed.

The owners of the A. B. Wilson patent were as little satisfied with this aspect of the case, as J. G. WILSON was with the previous one. They accordingly filed a bill in this Circuit to set aside the patent which had been issued to J. G. WILSON on the order of Judge DUNLOP, and moved for an injunction. Judge NELSON now grants the injunction, holding that Judge DUNLOP'S order was a nullity, and that the patent issued to J. G. WILSON in pursuance of it was without authority, and hence null and void.

We presume that the case will now be carried to the Supreme Court, which will be called upon to decide whether the order of Judge DUNLOP or that of Judge NELSON is of the better right.

It will be seen that if Judge NELSON'S view is sustained, an applicant for a patent who has fought through an interference and got the order of the Judge directing his patent to issue, will not be at all sure that another Richmond may not rise in his field to lead him through the same round again. And on the other hand, if the Supreme Court shall think that Judge DUNLOP was right, a party has only to get up an interference between his patent and one clearly subsequent to his, and when that is decided in his favor, use it as a perfect shield against one which is as clearly prior to his own. It remains to be seen to which of these two dangers the associated wisdom of the Supreme Court will expose patentees.

Jeff. Davis' View of Vicksburgh.

JEFF. DAVIS made a pilgrimage to the State of Mississippi last December, inspected the defences of Vicksburgh, and pronounced them good; and the day after Christmas delivered a congratulatory speech before the Mississippi Legislature in the capitol, at Jackson. In that speech, adverting to the movements of the Union armies, he said:

"Vicksburgh and Port Hudson are the real points of attack. Every effort will be made to capture those places, with the object of forcing the navigation of the Mississippi, of cutting off our communications with the trans-Mississippi Department, and of severing the western from the eastern portion of the Confederacy. Let then, all who have at heart the safety of the country, go without delay to Vicksburgh and Port Hudson; let them go for such length of time as they can spare—for thirty, or sixty, or for ninety days. Let their assist in preserving the Mississippi River, that great artery of the country, and thus conduce, more than in any other way, to the perpetuation of the Confederacy and the success of the cause."

JEFF. DAVIS was right. He had a just appreciation of the value of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson to the "perpetuation of the Confederacy." His opinion was shared by Unionists. It was and is held by sound strategists here and in Europe. In sole the Mississippi River, therefore, the rebellion receives its fatal blow by the confession of its chief and by the admission of the world.

DRAFT IN RHODE ISLAND.

PROVIDENCE, Tuesday, July 7.

The Provost-Marshal of the Eastern District began the drafting to-day. The names in four Wards were drawn. The announcement of the names of the drafted was received with great good humor. The drawing continues to-morrow. It also begins to-morrow in the Western District.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Three Hundred Thousand Troops to be Called For Under the Enrollment Act.

THE MISSION OF ALEX. H. STEPHENS.

His Proposed Conference With the President.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

A NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

It is understood that the call for troops under the Enrollment act will be made immediately. Several districts and one or two of the Eastern States have already had their quotas assigned them, and the first call will be for three hundred thousand. What "olive branches" get "waved" will be waved from the points of the Federal bayonets.

THE MISSION OF ALEX. H. STEPHENS.

The facts of the attempted conference with the President by Alex. H. STEPHENS are these: On Sunday the 5th inst., the Secretary of War received a dispatch from Col. LUDLOW, United States Commissioner for the exchange of prisoners of war, attached to the staff of Major-Gen. DIX, commander of the Department of Virginia, to the effect that ALEX. H. STEPHENS, Military Commissioner for the Confederate States, had presented himself in a Confederate steamer, under a flag of truce, and stated to Col. LUDLOW that he was the bearer of a communication in writing from JEFFERSON DAVIS, Commander-in-Chief of the land and naval forces of the Confederate States of America, to ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Commander-in-Chief of the land and naval forces of the United States of America, and that he desired to proceed in the same Confederate steamer to Washington and deliver the said communication, attended only by Rear-Admiral OWEN, as Secretary, for the purpose of conferring upon the subjects of the aforesaid communication, and the officers and crew of the steamer.

The Secretary of the Navy, on the same day, received a similar dispatch from Acting Rear Admiral LEE, commanding the squadron in Hampton Roads.

On Monday, the Secretary of War, and Secretary of the Navy, respectively answered to Col. LUDLOW and Rear Admiral LEE, that the request of ALEX. H. STEPHENS is inadmissible. The Customary Agents and Channels are adequate for all needful military communication and conference between the United States forces and the insurgents.

GENS. GRANT AND MEADE PROMOTED.

Gens. GRANT and MEADE were to-day promoted respectively Major and Brigadier Generals in the regular army.

REBEL FLAGS.

Col. SCHRIVER, Inspector-General of the Army of the Potomac, arrived to-night with his arms full of rebel flags captured at Gettysburgh. They were presented to the President.

THE BELKNAP COURT-MARTIAL.

The Belknap Court-martial has adjourned till Monday, to enable the accused to prepare his defence. The summing up of the Judge Advocate is expected on that day. The prosecution abandoned the charge of fraud in chartering vessels at excessive prices, the entire responsibility having been assumed by Mr. TUCKER.

THE COAST OF MAINE.

The result of the conference of Senators HAMLIN, FESSENDEN, MORRILL and WILSON with the Government, is that five vessels of war are ordered to protect the Eastern coast from Nantucket to Calais. One of them will watch the safety of the fishing craft.

DEATHS OF SOLDIERS.

The following deaths of soldiers are reported this morning:

Franklin Roberts, 90th Pennsylvania.
Jas. Wynn, 175th Pennsylvania.
Michael Haley, 1st Massachusetts.
John Barnes, Co. K, 1st U. S. cavalry.

Death of Archbishop Kenrick.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, July 8.

Archbishop KENRICK died suddenly this morning at his residence in this city, aged 66.

[FRANCIS PATRICK KENRICK, Archbishop of Baltimore, whose death is announced above, was a native of Dublin, was educated at Rome, came to the United States in 1821, and settled in Kentucky, where in 1829 he was consecrated as coadjutor of the Bishop of Philadelphia, whom he succeeded in 1842. It was during his episcopate in Philadelphia that the anti-Catholic riots occurred, and his efforts to preserve the peace were untiring.

In 1851 he was transferred to the Archiepiscopal See of Baltimore. In 1859 the Pope conferred upon him the "Primacy of Honor," giving him precedence over all other Roman Catholic prelates in this country. He was regarded as one of the most learned theologians of his creed in America, and was the author of a large number of works which are used as text-books in numerous seminaries.

Since the outbreak of the rebellion Archbishop Kenrick has been a steadfast upholder of the Government, and his precepts and example have done much to restore Baltimore and the State of Maryland to loyalty.]

The National Finances.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, July 8.

The Subscription Agent reports the sale of $200,000 five-twenties on July 7, and to-day $1,000,000 Bonds are being delivered to June 16. The recent victories in Pennsylvania, and the fall of Vicksburgh, have temporarily drawn the public mind from the investment of money, but in a few days the sales of five-twenties will be reported in more astonishing figures than ever. The continuing of Mr. COOKE'S agency in all parts of the country by the Secretary of the Treasury, is viewed with great satisfaction, especially in the West, as subscribers in remote districts have the advantage of using the ordinary means of remitting funds East by bankers' drafts or bank notes, as may be most convenient.

The New-Hampshire Legislature.

BOSTON, Wednesday, July 8.

The New-Hampshire Legislature to-day adopted the following:

Resolved, That the Adjutant-General be authorized and requested to fire a salute of one hundred guns in commemoration of the glorious victory won by our gallant soldiers over the rebel forces recently invading our own free soil, and of the fall of the rebel stronghold on the Mississippi River.

Personal.

Gen. McDOWELL, having closed the Court of Inquiry with which he has been engaged for some months past, is now in this City with his family.

Gen. FRANKLIN is at the Brevoort House awaiting a steamer to New-Orleans, whither he was ordered by the Secretary of War on making application for active service at the time of LEE'S invasion of Pennsylvania.

Gov. SEYMOUR is spending a few days in the City—staying at the Brevoort House.

Maj. Gen. CADWALLADER, who was wounded in the recent attack on Port Hudson, is rapidly recovering, and is on his way North.

Commodore INGRAHAM is at Washington Hall, Saratoga Springs, where rooms have also been engaged for the families of Commodore FARRAGUT and Gen. FRANKLIN.

The Late Brig.-Gen. Zook.

The remains of the late Brig.-Gen. ZOOK, who fell in the battle of Gettysburgh, will probably arrive in this City on Friday, and remain in state until Monday, when they will be transferred to Greenwood, where they will be interred. It is expected that the Common Council will give the remains of the gallant dead a military funeral.

THE FALL OF VICKSBURG

OFFICIAL DISPATCH FROM GEN. GRANT.

Complete Confirmation of the Glorious News.

The Garrison Paroled as Prisoners of War.

DETAILS OF THE SURRENDER.

Cause, Exhaustion of Supplies, and the Failure of Joe Johnston to Relieve the Garrison.

The Number of Prisoners about Eighteen Thousand.

Important Movements Inaugurated by Gen. Grant.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

A dispatch from Gen. GRANT to Gen. HALLECK, dated at Vicksburgh, at half-past 10 o'clock on the morning of the 4th of July, states that the rebels surrendered this morning, and that their troops were paroled as prisoners of war.

The movements about to be made by the forces of Gen. GRANT are detailed, but they are not proper for publication at present.

DETAILS OF THE SURRENDER.

HEADQUARTERS GEN. GRANT, NEAR VICKSBURGH, Friday, July 3—8 P. M.

At 8 this morning flags of truce appeared before A. J. SMITH's front, when Maj.-Gen. BOWEN and Col. MONTGOMERY were led blindfolded into our lines. They bore a communication from Gen. PEMBERTON of the following purport:

"Although I feel confident of my ability to resist your arms indefinitely, in order to stop the further effusion of blood, I propose that you appoint three Commissioners, to meet three whom I shall select, to arrange such terms as may best accomplish the result."

GRANT soon replied substantially in these words:

"The appointment of Commissioners is unnecessary. While I should be glad to stop any unnecessary effusion of blood, the only terms which I can entertain are those of unconditional surrender. At the same time, myself and men, and officers of this army, are ready to testify to the distinguished gallantry with which the defence of Vicksburgh has been conducted."

At 11 o'clock the messengers returned. This afternoon Gen. GRANT met Gen. PEMBERTON between the lines, and after an hour's consultation settled the surrender. Gen. PEMBERTON urged that the soldiers might be paroled here and furnished rations to carry them to their lines; in view of the bravery they have displayed and the advantages of the plan, Gen. GRANT will consent. The number of prisoners, wounded, &c., it is said, will be 18,000, of which 12,000 are in fighting condition now. The immediate cause of surrender is exhaustion of supplies and ammunition, and the failure of JOHNSTON to come to their aid.

At daylight our whole army will enter triumphantly and celebrate the doubly glorious anniversary. Not a shot has been fired since 8 o'clock from our lines, except from the river-mortars. A general interchange of civilities extend all along the lines.

A battle was fought at Helena, on the 4th, between PRICE with 8,000 and Gen. PLEASTON with 4,000. Rebels defeated with a loss, in killed, wounded and prisoners, of nearly 2,000. National loss 300. The gunboats were of invaluable service. They shelled the enemy from their position.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

CHICKASAW BAYOU, Friday, July 3, and CAIRO, Tuesday, July 7, 1863.

Vicksburgh is ours. Firing from our front ceased this morning, pending negotiations for a surrender, which have occupied the greater part of the day. The only contested point touching the surrender has been in reference to what shall be done with Gen. PEMBERTON's army. He asks and demands that, while the surrender is unconditional in other respects, the garrison which has so long and so heroically resisted our army, shall be spared unnecessary humiliation, and shall be paroled in Vicksburgh. This will be probably conceded from motives of expediency alone, and not as a condition, as it will save an immense expenditure for transportation and subsistence. Gens. GRANT and PEMBERTON had a long private interview, at the latter's request, in relation to the surrender, before it was determined. Officers accompanying the flag of truce have indicated by their conversation that all that has been written and published in the North concerning the suffering of the rebels in Vicksburgh has been but half the truth.

There are about 22,000 people in Vicksburgh, 10,000 of whom are efficient soldiers. Our army will take possession to-morrow morning. The surrender is just in time to save both armies from the loss and destruction of life which would have attended an attempt to carry the works of the enemy by storm, as such an attempt had been determined on for to-morrow morning. Not having been allowed an inside view before the departure of the dispatch-boat, I cannot give such interesting details as may be desired. Col. HAMBLAND, of the Special Post-office Department, will on the 8th establish a Post-office in Vicksburgh.

REJOICING AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

An order was issued this morning by Gen. SCHENCK, directing the firing of one hundred guns from Capitol Hill, and one hundred from the fortifications north of the city, at noon to-day, in honor of the late victory at Vicksburgh.

SECRETARY SEWARD'S SPEECH.

The following is a full report of the remarks made by Secretary SEWARD in Washington, on Tuesday night, after the reception of the news of the fate of Vicksburgh:

When I saw connection uprising to civil life I thought it inconsistent with the duty of a patriot and a Christian to avert the civil war if it was possible, and I tried to do so. If this was a weakness, I found what seemed an instruction excusing it in the prayer of our Saviour, that the cup, the full bitterness of which was endurance by himself alone, might pass. But I found, also, an instruction to duty in his resignation: "Nevertheless not my will but thine be done." When it was clear that without fault on your part or mine the civil war was inevitable, I felt thought it consistent with the duty of a patriot and a Christian to take care that the war should not begun not by the friends of the Union, but by its enemies—on their in maintaining the Union we should not only maintain the cause of our country, but should be maintaining it in righteous self-defence. Aggression, against aggression, is in every case weakness. Self-defence in a righteous cause is the strongest attitude that an individual or a nation can have. The weakest nation may resist a powerful adversary, while it occupies the attitude of self-defence. Powerful nations have been refused in making an unprovoked attack upon one infinitely weaker than themselves.

I thought further, that it was consistent with my duty as a patriot and a Christian to do what was in my power to render the war as light in its calamities and as short in its duration as possible. Therefore, I proposed to retain on the side of the loyal States as many of the States which were distorted by elements of sedition as could be retained by a course of calm and judicious conduct. I would have had, if possible, the insurrection confined to the men original so-called secession States. When all these conditions had been secured, so far as was possible to secure them, I thought still further that it was consistent with my duty, as a patriot and a Christian, to combine the loyal States and consolidate them into one party for the Union, because I knew that disunion had effectually combined the people of the Southern States to overthrow the Union. I thought that this could be done only through the sacrifice of individual and State and sectional opinions, interests, prejudices and ambitions.

A nation cannot be saved from death whose individual citizens lack the virtue to make these sacrifices. Unwilling to ask my fellow-citizens sacrifices I had not the resolution to make myself, I determined to wait until I should be called upon to make them. I said, I give up myself, my family, my friends, my party, all that I have laid up in the world in the past, all the interests that I now possess, and all the future that I had thought was in store for me. I take for my associate and leader the first brave and disinterested man who leads the way, and I follow his guidance and share his fortunes. I found a leader in ANDREW JOHNSON, of Tennessee, a man who tolerated and excused, if he did not justify, Slavery. As openly as all the world knew that I then abhorred and detested it, God knows I abhor and detest it now. I said, the country shall be saved by the Republican party if it will, by the Democratic party if it chooses, without Slavery if it is possible, with Slavery if it must.

Once engaged in the contest, I was prepared to demand, as I have demanded ever since, that no treasure, no amount of human life necessary to save the nation's life, should be withheld. I thought that the war might be ended in three months—in six months—in a year—and I labored to that end. But, as you will all recollect, that it was the people, and not only one man or any combination of men, that could bring it to an end, then or ever, and the people could only do it by showing as much zeal, determination and consistency as would not only keep cautious, or interested, or ambitious foreign nations aloof from the battle, but should make it their obvious interest to frown upon and discourage the insurrection. We failed to make that exhibition, and so the war has been protracted into its third year, through the encouragement and aid the insurrection has received from the fears of the listlessness of portions of our own people, and the influences of the enemies of the Republic and of human freedom throughout the world. It was doubtless ordained that it should be so, and therefore it may be believed that it was best that it should be so, although we may be allowed to indulge our sorrows over the augmented sum of miseries which the war has inflicted upon the land.

I say it is perhaps best, because I think that this ought to be the last insurrection in the United States—the last effort ever made to dissolve the Union. The more severe the suffering that attends this attempt, the less likely it is to be repeated. But we have reached, I think, the culminating point at last; we have ascertained the amount of sacrifice which is necessary to save the Union, and the country is prepared to make it. The force of secession is exhausted. There are no more States to go out in the insurrection. The insurrectionary States have no more soldiers to bring into the conflict. On the other hand, in the loyal States the plow has twice passed through the ground, and each time it has yielded the necessary harvest of defenders of the Union. The subsoil is deep, and is naturally rich in reserves of military strength, and virtue so that which has already been twice furrowed. It is for the disloyal citizens to decide whether they will give up the contest now, or abide a further and more conclusive trial. But, fellow-citizens, I have incontinently run into a speech and will now stop. ("Go, go on." "We want to hear you." "What of Vicksburgh?")

Vicksburgh! Why, that is just what I was speaking of. Vicksburgh fell on the Fourth of July, and Port Hudson, I do not doubt, will fall before the 6th of August. When both have fallen the United States are the masters of the Mississippi. The power that navigates the Mississippi dominates in North America, and makes a division of the United States of America impossible. Then I think that KIRBY SMITH will be by this time, or soon will have, occupied the mountain passes of East Tennessee; and thus by the two successes the new slave Confederation becomes divided into four separate, disconnected Territories. What kind of a Confederation will that be? —a chain broken into four fragments; and this to only the beginning. Texas west of the Mississippi, detached from the Confederation by the Mississippi; and Territories east of the Alleghany Mountains separated from the Gulf States by the Federal occupation of East Tennessee, will be followed by new and inevitable cases of fracture.

You have already seen Missouri detach herself from the Confederacy. Next you will see Arkansas come into Congress, as you have already seen Louisiana come there. On this side of the Mississippi look sharply at the Old North State, and you will see her preparing to return into the Union. A strange kind of Confederate State will be seen existing between what remains to the insurgents of Virginia and South Carolina. Two slices of secession bread made into a sandwich by the intervening slice of North Carolina ham, with its copious condiment of loyalty. My friends, we have seen a painful sight. We have seen thirteen stars of this glorious constellation shoot in blood and fire from their spheres. We are now to see one that will compensate us for all the pain the former spectacle has given us.

We are to see each one of those stars coming back from its wandering through a chaos of consuming anarchy, and take its place in the firmament to fall from thence, I trust no more forever. I am sure of this, because in the darkest night of our humiliation we have known two things—first, that these States could not be altogether extinguished, and second, that the attraction which brought them originally together, however weakened, cannot be utterly broken. Do not go away with the impression that all these things are to come to pass without further performance of duty, and further sacrifice. The Union is to be saved after all only by human efforts, by the efforts of the people. Those efforts are to be made in two forms—you must vote for the Union through all discouragements and alarms and complaints, whether those in whom you have reposed your confidence are wise or unwise, competent or incompetent, successful or unsuccessful; and you must fight for the Union, never retreating or giving ground before the enemy.

You must be prepared to do more. You must maintain your ground here in this Capital. When the rebellion ceases, let it find us here to celebrate the salvation of our country. If the Capital must fall before it can be saved, which I have always thought unnecessary, and which now seems impossible, even in that case, let us be buried amid its ruins. For myself, this is my resolution. If the people of the United States have virtue enough to save the Union, I shall have their virtue. If they have not, then it shall be my reward that my virtue excelled that of my countrymen.

If I fall here let no kinsman or friend remove my dust to a more hospitable grave. Let it be buried under the pavements of the avenue, and let the chariot wheels of those who have destroyed the liberties of my country rattle over my bones until a more heroic and worthy generation shall recall that country to life, liberty and independence. This shall be my only reward, living or dying, for whatever I may be able to do for the deliverance of my country from danger, so, on the other hand, that country may visit me with whatever censure or reproach for short comings that may seem to it just, but the world shall never hear a word of complaint issue from my lips.

This is my resolution. Now, fellow-citizens, for yours. What should that be? That resolution must be that you will not wait for draft or conscription. Ask not whether the enemy is near or whether he is far off. Ask only is there still an enemy in arms against the United States—a domestic one or a foreign one—array yourselves to meet that enemy. Thus, when the consequent demands, the desolation of your country or a foreign enemy proposes to intervene, your answer for both is ready. I will write it down and deliver it for you, as I have done heretofore. Do you only stand ready to maintain it, and if I can do more service in the ranks than I can in being your organ, I will enroll myself with you. The flag of the Union must wave not only in the capital and in the Free States, so-called, and on the Mississippi, but must go through the Union until not one disloyal citizen remains in arms to oppose it.

English Merchants and the Neutrality Laws of Great Britain.

We are indebted to DAVID HOADLEY, Esq., for the following copy of a petition to Earl RUSSELL, which has been prepared and signed by a large number of the leading shipping merchants of Liverpool, concerning the departure from English ports of vessels intended to commit depredations upon the commerce of the United States. It is a very interesting letter and shows that a very formidable public sentiment in England protests very warmly against the gross violations of neutrality which have already taken place:

To the Right Honorable the Earl Russell, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Foreign Department:

The memorial of the undersigned shipowners of Liverpool showeth:

That your memorialists, who are deeply interested in British shipping, view with alarm the probable future consequences of a state of affairs which permits a foreign belligerent to construct in and send to sea from British ports, vessels-of-war, in contravention of the provisions of the existing law.

That the immediate effect of placing at the disposal of that foreign belligerent a very small number of steam cruisers has been to paralyze the mercantile marine of a powerful maritime and naval nation, inflicting within a few months losses, direct and indirect, on its shipowning and mercantile interests, which years of peace may prove inadequate to retrieve.

That your memorialists cannot shut their eyes to the probability that in any future war between England and a foreign Power, however insignificant in naval strength, the example now set by subjects of Her Majesty, while England is neutral, may be followed by citizens of other countries neutral when England is belligerent; and that the attitude of helplessness in which Her Majesty's Government have declared their inability to detect and punish breaches of the law, notoriously committed by certain of Her Majesty's subjects, may hereafter be successfully imitated by the Governments of those other countries in answer to English remonstrances.

That the experience of late events has proved to the conviction of your memorialists that the possession by a belligerent of swift steam cruisers, under no necessity actual or conventional, to visit the possibly blockaded home ports of that belligerent, but able to obtain all requisite supplies from neutrals, will become a weapon of offence against which no preponderance of naval strength can effectually guard, and the severity of which will be felt in the ratio of the shipping and mercantile wealth of the nation against whose mercantile marine the efforts of those steam cruisers may be directed.

That the effect of future war with any Power thus enabled to purchase, prepare and refit vessels-of-war in neutral ports, will inevitably be to transfer to neutral flags that portion of the sea-carrying trade of the world which is now enjoyed by your memorialists and by other British shipowners.

That over and above the chances of pecuniary loss to themselves, your memorialists share in the regret which every law-regarding community must naturally look on attempts successful enough to evade the provisions of an act of Parliament, passed for a single and simple purpose, but which has been found not to give the Executive all the powers needed for its effective execution.

That your memorialists would accordingly respectfully urge upon your Lordship the expediency of proposing to Parliament to sanction the introduction of such amendments into the Foreign Enlistment act as may have the effect of giving greater power to the Executive to prevent the construction in British ports of ships destined for the use of belligerents; and your memorialists would further suggest to your Lordship the importance of endeavoring to secure the assent of the Government of the United States of America, and of other foreign countries, to the adoption of similar regulations in those countries also.

All which your memorialists respectfully submit.

DEAFNESS, NOISES IN THE HEAD, Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat, CATARRH CURED BY DR. VON EISENBERG.

Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."

NEW TESTIMONY.

NEW-YORK, May 6.

I was entirely deaf in my left ear, consequent by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. VON EISENBERG's care, who, by his great skill, restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain, and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the air-passage performs its functions. I am amply satisfied, and recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.

THOMAS GRAHAM, No. [illegible] 6th-st."

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1863.

I have great pleasure in testify to the skill of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I went into his office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes in each of my ears, gave me no pain whatsoever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG's unsurpassing skill.

SAMUEL C. HUNT, No. 6 Meserole-st., Greenpoint, L. I."

No. 128 MADISON-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a dangerous discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. VON EISENBERG, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 24, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. VON EISENBERG removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 32 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED. JUNE 25, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain near the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several specialists in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG's marvelous success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

HUGH GILLON, No. 70 Fulton-st., Brooklyn.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED. READ

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH for many years, which the best of medical treatment could not entirely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of your success performed by Dr. VON EISENBERG, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as his scientific and successful treatment has so far shown him to be master of his skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. VON EISENBERG, who is certainly cured beyond a doubt."

THE HEPTAMERON—BY MARGARET, Q

FINANCIAL.

LAKE ERIE AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND BONDS.

The Lake Erie and Pacific Railroad Company, in the State of Indiana, now offer for sale their entire issue of $200,000 First, and only, Mortgage Bonds, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in the City of New-York.

These Bonds are secured by a DEED OF TRUST, conveying the FIRST and ONLY lien upon the entire Road, its franchises, appurtenances, rolling stock, &c.

Between its eastern terminus, the White Water Valley, near Richmond, and its western, the Wabash River, near Terre Haute, it passes through the richest, best cultivated and most densely populated portion of the State of Indiana.

The road is the CENTRAL SECTION of the otherwise completed TRUNK LINE, connecting the great Southwest at LOUISVILLE, Ky., on the Ohio River, and at an early day with TOLEDO and SANDUSKY, on Lake Erie.

The Company is wholly without debt (except its bonded debt) and being strong in its local traffic, and connecting with roads that must materially increase the volume of its revenue, the BOARD OF DIRECTORS, with great confidence, invite the attention of capitalists to these securities, believing that they offer an opportunity for a first-class railroad investment, than which, in their judgment, there is no better to be had.

The subjoined extracts of the Company, together with many showing the locality and advantages of the Road, can be had from either of the Trustees of the Deed of Trust, in this City, named below, and from other gentlemen, where the bonds are only to be had.

LEAD MINES TO LEASE.

The undersigned offers to lease for a long term of years his widely-known Coal Hill and Union Lead Mines, situate at Rossie, in the County of St. Lawrence and State of New-York, within 13 miles of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh Railroad, which connects at Rome with the New-York Central Railroad and the New-York and Erie Canal.

The celebrity of these mines for their richness of yield, and the small expense at which they can be worked, render unnecessary any detailed description of them. If, however, such for information can be made in Appleton's "New American Cyclopædia," vol. 10, page 376, article "Lead;" in "The Metallic Wealth of the United States," by J. D. Whitney, and in "The Natural History of the State of New-York," part 4, page 237, by Prof. Emmons.

Connected with each one of the above-mentioned mines are new and powerful steam-engines, necessary pumps and appurtenances—in short, all requisite tools and machinery of the most perfect and approved kinds for their immediate working, and which will be disposed of in the lease at a low valuation.

To individuals desirous of profitably engaging in the manufacture of lead, or to stock companies that may be formed for that purpose, no mining property in this country can afford the advantages to be secured from a lease of the above-mentioned mines.

For terms, &c., inquire at my land offices in Ordensburgh or Rossie, St. Lawrence County, New-York, or of Messrs. MAITLAND, PHELPS & CO., New-York City.

Yours respectfully, GEORGE PARISH.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 20 years practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Weak Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been cured of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to remove you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special discoveries in this most neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated and long neglected cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few days. Young men, recently ruined by self-abuse, need no treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by sending a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call and or write.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st. Conducted on the plan of the Hospital des Veneriens, Paris, where those who will or from fear of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years' extensive practice exclusively devoted to the treatment of those complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essences of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. It invigorates the weakness of the sexual organs, shattered constitution—physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The men to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal disease, possessing the most certain, speedy and effectual cures in the world, guaranteed a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1826. N. B.—Those who have used their patentives are never without. Send for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy. Ladies can be cured by no other medicine, sent by mail. The afflicted should send their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures guaranteed.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH restored in three days by Dr. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE. This wonderful agent restores manhood to the aged, shattered constitution, radically curing Seminal Weakness, Sexual Debility, and impediments to marriage, Nervous Irritability, Dyspepsia, Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from self-abuse, &c. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is one week. Failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. Sent by mail, $1 per vial. Those who are young and body destroying disease, secret habits or Dr. POWERS' Invigorating Essence is a never-failing cure. Sold by WALTER POWERS, M. D., No. 50 Lispenard-st., between Broadway and Church-st., New-York.

IMPORTANT TO THE MARRIED AND THOSE ABOUT TO BE MARRIED.—Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, has just published, the 150th edition of the celebrated work, "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family. Price $1. Sold at his office, No. 129 Liberty-st., New-York; or can be sent by mail, free of postage, to any part of the United States, on receipt of price. Address, Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Box No. 1,324, New-York City. For sale by H. RICHARDSON, at No. 1 Vesey-st. (Astor House,) and No. 15 Ann-st.; FEDERHEN & CO., 13 Court-st., Boston.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE—Containing nearly 300 pages, and 150 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs, in a plain of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its dreadful consequences upon the mind and body, with the physician's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the report of cases treated. A truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who entertain doubts of their physical condition. Sent, free of postage, to any address on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage-stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.

DR. POWERS' PERIODICAL DROPS are designed for both married and single ladies, and are the very best thing known for the purpose, as they will bring on the monthly sickness in cases of obstruction, even years after all other remedies of the kind have been tried in vain. Expressly for obstinate cases. Warranted as represented in every respect, or the price will be refunded. ☞ Beware of imitations! Purchase directly of Dr POWERS, 50 Lispenard-st., New-York

DR. WARD'S MAGICAL INVIGORATORS, IN the form of Pills, will, in fifteen minutes after being taken, make the recipient as vigorous as if nature had never retarded or debilitated it. To the unmarried or single, in every physical exigency, this unrivaled medicine is earnestly recommended as a complete restorative of the nervous system where manhood has been impaired. Prepared by WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st., between Broadway and Church-st. Call or send for circulars.

DR. HUNTER'S RED DROP RESTORES the vigor of youth in four days. Restores manhood to the most shattered system. No. 3 Division-st., New-York, the only place. Beware of bogus Dr. Hunters. The City is full of knaves, up to every trick to rob him of his great reputation as a skillful and reliable physician. No other office but No. 3 Division-st. Established in 1824. Eight separate rooms and a private entrance.

SOMETHING FOR EVERY LADY.—DR. WARD'S Great Female Benefactor or Golden Regulating Pills. Infallible in correcting, regulating and removing all obstructions, from whatever cause, and they will never disappoint the anxious patient. Office No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, where Dr. WARD can be consulted, confidentially, day and evening.

DR. JOHNSON, NO. 14 DUANE-ST., MAY be consulted with confidence on private diseases. Thirty years in one specialty enables him to guarantee speedy and permanent cures. N. B.—Those who may have been deceived by advertisements, &c., can call on Dr. J. with the certainty of receiving benefitable treatment.

DRS. GRIFFIN, NO. 258 GRAND-ST., N.Y., opposite Lord and Taylor's, and No. 267 Fulton-st., Brooklyn, are inserting their Incorruptible Gold Teeth, with or without extracting the roots; full sets on gold or platina, $25; on silver or rubber, $8; partial sets (gold) per tooth, $2; silver or rubber, $1; extracting, 25c.

ADVICE TO LADIES.—IN ALL CASES where infallible medicines are desired, or mode of treatment that never fails, call upon Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, author of "The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion," who treats female complaints exclusively. Office No. 129 Liberty-st.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases in four days. Beware of spurious and worthless imitations; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent sufferings of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. What is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known that thousands seen in every department of social life begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. It is equally true that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attempted it, and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 100 pages, 50 colored illustrations. The best work out.

Grained leather boots, pairs	10,000
Woolen socks, pairs	25,000
Mattresses, (with two covers for each)	12,000
Blankets	25,000
Black silk neckerchiefs	20,000

Offers may be made for one or more classes, as the contractor may prefer, but all the articles embraced in a class must be bid for.

Each class will be considered by itself, and the contract for that class will be awarded to the bidder whose proposals for the articles comprised in the class are lowest in the aggregate.

The cloth for the pea jackets shall be refined pilot cloth, pure indigo blue, wool-dyed.

The full cloth shall be of full cloth, dyed pure indigo blue, made of good wool only, and shall conform in the gizes, color, grain of wool, and in all other respects, to the samples deposited at the navy yards.

The cloth for the blue cloth round jackets and trowsers shall be refined, all wool, and pure indigo blue, wool-dyed.

The cotton must be 27 inches wide inside of list, with a bending to contain, of not less than twelve white woolen threads at each end of the piece; must weigh not less than 9¾ ounces per yard; the cotton in the cloth to be of good grade; the warp must be cotton, pure indigo blue, yarn-dyed, and the filling wool, pure indigo blue, wool-dyed. Each bale of 400 yards shall average nine and a half ounces to the yard, and no piece shall be below 9¼ ounces to the yard. The satinet to be woven in the same manner and like the above. The broadcloth and satinet of which garments are made shall be well sponged before made up.

The flannel must be all wool, wool-dyed pure indigo blue, and milled; must be in pieces of about 40 yards in length, 30 inches wide, and weigh five ounces to the square yard, with a list on each edge of four white woolen threads, woven in the whole length of the piece. To be packed in bales of ten pieces, the pieces to be rolled separately without cloth boards; each bale to contain 400 yards and 125 pounds net, nominal. No piece to have a less average weight than 5 4-16 ounces per yard.

The overshirts must be made of flannel like the above.

The woolen knit undershirts must be warp knit, all wool, best American fleece, indigo wool-dyed, made up entirely by hand, of the following size—No. 1, 36 inches long, 18 inches round; No. 2, 34 inches long, 18 inches round; to weigh not less than 11½ pounds per dozen, in all respects equal to samples.

The woolen knit drawers are to be all wool, best American fleece, indigo wool-dyed, warp stitch, of two sizes—No. 1, waist to measure round 34 inches, length 34 inches, 44 inches round the hip; No. 2, waist to measure round 36 inches, length 34 inches, 46 inches round the hip; waistband to be of strong twisted cotton, well sewed, and firmly attached to the body, to correspond in every respect with the sample.

The Barnsley sheeting must be free from cotton, 90 inches in width; weight, twelve ounces 31-100 per yard; texture, 4 by 4 to 1-10 inch.

The canvas duck must be free from cotton, 27 inches in width, and inked 50 yards in length; double twilled warp and filling; weight, eight ounces 35-100 per yard; texture, 9 by 10 to ¼ inch.

The shoes must be plainly sewed with the contractor's name, number of the shoe, and year when made. The sizes to be the following proportions for each 100 pairs, unless otherwise ordered, viz.: 8 of No. 1, 11 of No. 2, 23 of No. 3, 28 of No. 4, 16 of No. 5, 7 of No. 6, and 7 of No. 11. They must be sewed with 4 square awl, and conform in all respects to the samples at the yards, and be delivered in good strong boxes, the boxes of which to be securely fastened with screws, and each box to contain 20 pairs, in these proportions, viz.: 3 pairs of No. 4, with 27 of No. 3, 12 of No. 7, with 12 of No. 5, or vice versa. 16 of No. 6 with 7 of No. 10, and 7 of No. 11. The calfskin and kipskin shoes to be packed in separate boxes.

The boots must be of the best quality of oak tanned grain leather, sewed with a square awl; all the sewing and stitching to be done with the hand, to correspond with the sample in every respect, except that the sides shall be sewed with the hand, and not machine stitch, as on sample.

The woolen socks must be woven or knit, indigo mixed, all wool, shall be well scoured, and in color and quality fully equal to sample.

The mattresses must weigh ten pounds, including ticking, which is to be cut 6 feet 6 inches in length and 31 inches wide. The covers must measure 17 inches in length and 20 inches in width. The hair, ticking and covers must conform to samples.

The mankin must be equal to the best blue American mankin, 36 inches wide, texture 5 threads by 4 threads to the inch of warp and filling, pure Bengal indigo.

The blankets must weigh 6¼ pounds per pair, and measure 58 by 78 inches each. A bale of 50 pairs must weigh 325 pounds, and no pair shall weigh less than 6 pounds 3 ounces. They must be made of clean wool, and each blanket must be marked "U. S. Navy," as in the sample.

The black silk handkerchief must be 31½ by 31½ inches, and weigh one ounce and twelve grains Troy; texture, 14 by 22 to one-eighth of an inch.

Bidders for the above will specify whether the articles they propose to furnish are to be of foreign growth, production and manufacture of the United States, as a preference will be given to such.

A schedule of the three sizes for each 100 pieces of made-up clothing will be found with the samples at the respective yards, and all the above articles, including the necessary buttons, rings, &c., are to be fully equal in the quality, texture, color, weight, and finish of material, and conform in pattern, size and workmanship to said samples. The price must be uniform, and the stations.

All the above articles must be subject to such inspection at the place of delivery as the chief of this bureau may direct; and no article will be received that is not fully equal to the sample in every respect, and which does not conform to the stipulation and provisions of the contract to be made.

The whole must be delivered at the risk and expense of the contractor. Each box and bale to be marked with the contractor's name. The inspecting officers to be appointed by the Navy Department.

The offers must distinguish the prices for each article mentioned in a class, and must calculate and deliver every expense attending the fulfillment of the contract, including the necessary buttons.

In case of failure on the part of the contractors to deliver the several articles which may be ordered from them, in proper time and of proper quality, the Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing shall be authorized to procure the articles so ordered, at the expense of the party so failing, and the amount thereof may be required to supply the deficiency, under the penalty to be expressed in the contract; the record of a requisition, or a duplicate copy thereof, at the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, or at either of the navy yards aforesaid, shall be evidence that such requisition has been made and received.

Two or more approved sureties in a sum equal to the estimated amount of the respective contracts will be required, and twenty per centum will be withheld from the amount of all payments on account thereof as additional security, and not in any event to be paid until it is in all respects complied with; and eighty per centum of the amount of all deliveries made will be paid by the navy agent within ten days after the warrants for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Navy.

Bidders whose proposals shall be accepted (and to the others) will be forthwith notified, and as early as practicable a contract will be transmitted to them for execution, which contract must be returned to the bureau within ten days, exclusive of the time required for the regular transmission of the mail.

A record, or duplicate of the letter informing a bidder of the acceptance of his proposal, will be deemed a notification thereof, within the meaning of the act of 1846, and his bid will then be made and accepted in conformity with this understanding.

Every offer made must be accompanied as directed in the act of Congress making appropriations for the naval service for 1860-'61, approved 10th of August, 1846 by a written guarantee, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid be accepted, enter into an obligation within five days, with good and sufficient sureties, to furnish the supplies proposed. The Bureau will not be obligated to consider any proposal unaccompanied by the guarantee required by the law, and by satisfactory evidence that the bidder has the means required by act of Congress. The competency of the guarantee to be certified by the Navy Agent, District Attorney, or the Collector of the customs.

Blank forms of proposals may be obtained on application to the Navy Agents at Portsmouth, N. H., Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and at this Bureau.

The attention of bidders is called to the samples and description of articles required, as, in the inspection before reception, a just, but rigid comparison will be made between the articles offered and the samples and contract, receiving none that fall below them; and their attention is also particularly directed to the joint resolution of 27th March, 1854, in addition to the act of 16th August, 1846.

THE BEST SOAP IN USE.
E. MORGAN'S SONS'
PEARL
MOTTLED SOAP.
This Soap is, without doubt, the best and cheapest in use. It is manufactured from the best materials; and being entirely free from any of those injurious substances so often found in soap, we do not hesitate to pronounce it unequaled for washing flannels and fine goods, or for family use of any kind. We have several other qualities of soaps which give the most unqualified satisfaction wherever used. Our house has been established upward of fifty years, and has a wide reputation for manufacturing only from the best materials.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

HARRISBURG, Tuesday, July 7, 1863.

Major-Gen. SIGEL arrived yesterday. In the evening he was serenaded, at the Jones House, by the band attached to the Twenty-second New-York regiment. A large concourse of citizens surrounded the hotel and vociferously shouted for Sigel. Presently he made his appearance, and, having been introduced to the assemblage by Gen. HALL, spoke as follows:

CITIZENS AND SOLDIERS: I thank you, and especially my friend, Gen. HALL, for the attentions you and you have shown me. I feel honored in being made the recipient of your favor, and by being introduced by Gen. HALL, the representative of the army of New-York. He comes from the Empire State, where I was once a soldier. You can now perceive that the efforts of our militia have not been in vain. It is the duty of every man capable of being an officer or soldier to step forward and attach himself to some military organization. We see regiments coming from New-York join hand in hand with the Pennsylvania troops for the protection of their soil. [Cheers.] I hope you will be strong enough to prevent all further invasion of your State. The militia of Pennsylvania have done nobly. But you know the militia are not like veteran soldiers, and require the assistance of the people to cheer them up and fill their ranks. Do not fail, then, to do your duty toward them. I am glad to learn that the Eleventh Army corps, under their Commander, have behaved bravely. I am sorry to say I was not with the army during the three days' fight; but you may rest assured I shall not be satisfied until our enemies are driven to the Rappahannock. [Cheers.]

Gen. HALL was then called for, and made a few remarks, after which Gen. SIGEL again stepped upon the balcony, and proposed three cheers for the success of the Army of the Potomac, which were given with a will.

Gen. COUCH was next called upon, but it happened he was at the Department headquarters attending to important business. The band then discoursed a lively air, after which the crowd dispersed.

POSTSCRIPT.

THURSDAY, 4 O'CLOCK A. M.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

THE EXPECTED BATTLE.

Cannonading in the Direction of Hagerstown.

FREDERICK, Md., Wednesday, July 8—9 P. M.

Gen. FRENCH has been placed in command of the Ninth corps, which has been largely reinforced, and is now in motion.

It is stated upon reliable authority that LEE has no alternative but to deliver battle or surrender.

About 600 prisoners arrived here to-day. This arrival, according to statements of high officials, swells the number already reported to 11,000. These latter were captured and forwarded by Gen. KILPATRICK.

Considerable cannonading has been heard to-day, in the direction of Hagerstown, but as no results have yet come in, it is believed to have been caused by our cavalry attacks upon the enemy's outposts.

The wounded paroled officers from Gettysburgh to-day correct the published statements in regard to the following officers: Gen. PAUL was alive last night, with some hopes of his recovery; Col. ROBT. of the Ninety-fourth New-York, was uninjured; Col. WHEELOCK is uninjured, but a prisoner; Col. TILTON, of the Sixteenth Maine, ditto; Gen. BARTER is uninjured; Col. FAIRCHILD, of the Second Wisconsin, had an arm amputated.

Hundreds of rebel deserters are in the country surrounding Gettysburgh, having changed their clothes and turned farmers in the harvest fields.

The skies are clear to-night. It is not believed a general battle will come off to-morrow.

Gen. BUTTERFIELD, Chief of Staff, has been relieved from that position, and the accomplished soldier and gentleman, Gen. WARREN, appointed in his stead. The change meets with general approbation, particularly among the Heads of the Departments and general staff.

THE SURRENDER OF VICKSBURGH.

CAIRO, Wednesday, July 8.

A special to the Missouri Democrat says:

"By the arrival of the steamer Niagara, with Lieut. DUNN, of Gen. SULLIVAN's Staff, from Vicksburgh, 4th, who is the bearer of dispatches from Gen. GRANT to the War Department, we have the confirmation of the capitulation of Vicksburgh. From reliable sources I have been able to get the following particulars of the closing scenes of the siege of Vicksburgh:

The first flag of truce for some time was on July 1, asking an escort for two Englishmen, who had been shut up for some time in the Confederacy, which was granted by Gen. GRANT. On the previous day the rebels made an unsuccessful sortie on the works on our left, meaning to take our soldiers out of their rifle-pits this way. JOHNSTON was reported only 20 miles off. The men were in line of battle to receive the attack.

On the 3d another flag of truce came into our lines, brought by two Confederate officers, one of whom was Maj.-Gen. BOWEN. The messengers were blindfolded. They remained, awaiting the return of Gen. SHERMAN, who took the dispatches from PEMBERTON to Gen. GRANT. Their eyes were bandaged. After an hour they conversed freely with the Union officers.

One of the messengers said iron enough had been thrown into the city to stock immense foundries and build monuments for all those who had fallen.

The messengers were again blindfolded and escorted to a safe point from which they could enter their own lines. Great curiosity was manifested by the officers and soldiers to learn the contents of Gen. PEMBERTON's dispatches, which was finally gratified. The rebel General had seen fit to intimate that the unnecessary effusion of blood and the loss of lives might be prevented by a brief cessation of hostilities, during which commissioners might be appointed to agree on terms for a surrender. He also intimated that he could hold the city for an indefinite period.

Gen. GRANT's reply was very brief, saying that Gen. PEMBERTON had it in his hands to stop bloodshed at any moment. Commissioners were unnecessary, as the only stipulations he could accept were unconditional surrender. It concludes with a deserved tribute to the bravery and endurance of the rebel garrison; and said if they surrendered they should be treated courteously due to prisoners of war.

The rebel messenger was not gone long when Gen. PEMBERTON sent again, asking a personal interview with Gen. GRANT, which was promptly granted, at 3 P. M. of the same day a conference took place, about midway between the fronts. The two Generals went aside. What was said during the conference can only be judged from the results. After a little more than an hour, terms were agreed upon, and the rebels surrendered.

It was arranged that the Federal forces should enter at 10 A. M. the next day, July 4th. The rebels were all to be paroled. The officers allowed to retain their their horses and four days rations to be taken from the rebel stores, and to be considered as prisoners liable to exchange. The enemy, numbering from 25,000 to 30,000, by this arrangement fell into Gen. GRANT's hands, along with small arms, forts, defences, &c. Cannon are plenty, and in quality equal to the best in the Confederacy.

At 10 A. M. of the 4th, Gen. SHERMAN's division marched into and garrisoned the city, the bands playing the National air of the contending forces. The scene was witnessed by thousands of National and rebel soldiers: who for the first time in weeks showed themselves with impunity above the rifle-pits, and during them weeks they had been within five yards of each other.

Gen. GRANT came slowly to the place of rendezvous, smoking a cigar, and apparently the only unexcited person in the vast assemblage.

Gen. PEMBERTON first remarked that he had been present when the different fortresses surrendered to the Federal arms in the Mexican war.

In these the enemy were granted terms and conditions, and he thought his army was as well entitled to favors as well as a foreign foe. Gen. GRANT listened and then proposed a private conversation, to which Gen. PEMBERTON agreed, and the flag was soon seen above the buildings where lately the rebel ensigns met the breeze, and Vicksburgh was again in loyal possession.

Not long after formal possession had been taken of the city, Col. MARELLARD made his entrance to take charge of his office, and agreed to establish National mail routes with the rest of the world.

GEN. ROSECRANS' CAMPAIGN.

Interesting Details of His Movement in Pursuit of Bragg.

Inauguration of the Emancipation Policy by Gen. Rosecrans.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND, MANCHESTER, Tenn., Sunday, June 28, 1863.

From the moment the three main columns by which the army has been advancing met at Beech Grove, it was from that moment between us and the rebels merely a question of legs. All possible strategy reduced itself to the simple problem of a race for Tullahoma, and the devil catch the hindmost.

Up to that point, it was possible to blind and deceive the enemy. So long as our left wing (McCook's corps) moved directly south on the Murfreesboro and Shelbyville Pike—so long as our reserves and our cavalry menaced the rebel stronghold on lines still further to the west—so long as our centre (THOMAS' corps) continued at Hoover's Gap, threatening Fairfield and Wartrace, and thus looking to a direct advance on Shelbyville—so long it was possible for Gen. ROSECRANS to mask his real intentions, and make BRAGG believe that Shelbyville was really his objective point.

But—the moment McCook, having uncovered Liberty Gap, left the Shelbyville road, and struck eastward, to form a junction with the centre corps at Beech Grove, on the Manchester Pike, and the left wing (CRITTENDEN's corps) was swung round toward Manchester—from that moment, I say, the real nature, object and end of the movement became apparent. It was obviously a strategic manœuvre on the rebel right flank, with a view of grasping their communications at Tullahoma; and it became, as I said before, a race for who would get there first. Last night found the centre corps and headquarters established at Manchester, with the corps of McCook and CRITTENDEN pushing on after us as rapidly as the roads would permit. This morning finds the main force well massed here, on the point of starting on the final decisive march.

From Manchester to Tullahoma is twelve miles; from Shelbyville is eighteen miles. For once, therefore, we have the shorter and interior line, though the rebels have this advantage over us, that they have a railroad line from Shelbyville to Tullahoma.

It becomes, therefore, a problem of portentous moment to determine at what point the rebels discovered our real intentions, and began movements for the purpose of checking them, by a change of front from Shelbyville and Wartrace to Tullahoma.

There is pretty good evidence that up to Thursday BRAGG continued to think our designs were against Shelbyville, for on that day the regiment which was on post duty at that town, was hurried off to Shelbyville. By Friday, therefore, or Saturday at furthest, it must have become apparent to BRAGG that Tullahoma, not Shelbyville was our objective. From that moment he began a left, backward, swinging movement, and it is definitely ascertained, that for the past twenty-four hours the rebels have been putting forth every effort to mass their troops and trains at Tullahoma.

There is, accordingly, every present prospect, that, within from twenty-four to forty-eight hours from this time (Sunday morning) we shall have met the army of BRAGG in a great battle at or near Tullahoma. With respect to the defences of Tullahoma I have no precise information. It is understood, however, that the Northern approaches of the town are covered by a line of rifle pits and redans, and by abattis. Gen. ROSECRANS will of course manœuvre so as to take it from its weak side, if indeed there be any necessity for taking this particular position at all, for if we shall be successful in anticipating BRAGG, and shall be able to seize any point on his line of retreat, we shall be able to compel him to fight a battle on ground of our own selection, and with his back to Murfreesboro.

My last letter brought the advance of the centre corps and headquarters to Beach Grove on Friday night, waiting till the right wing should arrive from Liberty Gap, and the left wing should have swung round and come abreast of us on the Manchester road. During the night and on Saturday morning, McCOOK's corps came over and formed a junction with THOMAS' corps at Beach Grove, and CRITTENDEN's corps, (kept back by the horrible condition of the road on which it was moving,) though not as well advanced as could have been wished, was yet within cooperating distance.

At the time of my last writing, McCOOK had carried Liberty Gap. The defile had been held by the Fifth and Fifteenth Arkansas, LIDDELL's brigade and GARSIDE's battery. The assault on our part was made on Thursday by JOHNSTON's and DAVIS' divisions, and the powerful position carried in a brilliant manner, with a loss on the part of JOHNSTON of 151 killed and wounded, and on the part of DAVIS of 25. On Friday McCOOK pushed forward, uncovering the Gap handsomely, driving the enemy some distance south, and taking some twenty prisoners. This being done, he crossed his command over by a road just above Liberty Gap to the Manchester Pike, making a junction with THOMAS' corps yesterday.

My detailed record of the doings of THOMAS' corps, brought the account up to Friday morning, at which time the rebels still continued to hold the southern mouth of Hoover's Gap, the line of Garrison Creek, and the Fairfield road to Fairfield and thence to Wartrace. The position was an extremely strong one, and the rebels had twenty pieces of artillery posted for its defence. The rebel troops consisted of the whole of STUART's division, comprising the brigades of BUTTS, BROWN, CLAYTON and BURGWYN JOHNSTON. Gen. THOMAS formed his command at noon, deploying his divisions on the hill-slopes of Garrison Creek. The rebels at first held on very stubbornly, but a vigorous charge broke them and they retreated down the road toward Fairfield. A citizen who lives on that road, told me that they passed his house (which Gen. STUART had as his headquarters) at the double-quick, saying that they would make Wartrace that night. Our loss in this brush was thirty killed and wounded. The rebels lost much more heavily—the regiment being cut almost to pieces and a number of prisoners captured.

While this was going on, on Friday afternoon, WILSON's mounted brigade was sent by a detour to block up the lower end of Matt's Hollow, a long defile five miles south of Beach Grove. The rebels, however, fearing to be thus bagged, had made a hasty retreat to Manchester. WILSON accordingly advanced on Manchester on the Duck River. REYNOLDS' division was in the afternoon pushed down the Manchester road below Matt's Hollow, to within six miles of Manchester.

Saturday morning ROSEMAN's and MINTY's divisions moved out upon Fairfield, and then moved by a cross road, making the connection with us on the Manchester Pike. MINTY and ROSEMAN's divisions meanwhile pushed straight on toward Manchester.

Thus the operations of Friday forced the whole length of that powerful line of mountain defiles running across from Hoover's to Liberty Gap. The rebels had fully intended to have made a stubborn resistance along this outer line, and had made all their calculations accordingly. But on finding that we had so extended a front, they became afraid of being overlapped, and accordingly abandoned these strongholds with much less resistance than they might otherwise have made.

It seems that, up to this time, the rebels were fully under the impression that ROSECRANS was simply making a vigorous demonstration to cover up the supposed withdrawal of the main portion of his army, to reinforce GRANT. The proportions of the demonstration have now, however, disabused them of any such illusions.

WILSON's command reached Winchester early yesterday morning, capturing a detail of the enemy who had been sent up to look after some supplies. The garrison that had been stationed here was withdrawn on Tuesday, as BRAGG was anticipating a general attack on Shelbyville, and was drawing in all the detachments. Soon afterward the head of THOMAS' column reached Manchester, and evening found the centre column and headquarters encamped on the banks of the Duck.

We could have advanced last night, and even this morning, had it not been for the unavoidable delay in CRITTENDEN's corps. As I write the General has just reached headquarters. The General tells me that his command is still encamped on the Bradyville and Manchester road, from ten to a dozen miles back of here. It will be late to-night before he can possibly have the head of his column here. According to the programme he was to have been here on Friday night. We have thus lost two entire days, in a crisis when every hour is of inexpressible value. This is certainly much to be regretted, though the fact is owing to causes entirely beyond Gen. CRITTENDEN's control—the tremendous rains of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday having made the dirt road on which his column was advancing all but impassable.

Gen. ROSECRANS has this moment read me a dispatch (the substance of which I have sent you by telegraph) from Gen. GORDON GRANGER, announcing the capture by that commander of the town of Shelbyville, which was till yesterday the headquarters of Gen. BRAGG. Gen. GRANGER's command, forming the reserve corps, was assigned the rôle of demonstrating vigorously down the road from Murfreesboro to Shelbyville, with the discretionary power of moving, if he saw fit, on Shelbyville. Learning that the place was being evacuated by BRAGG, he pushed on, reaching it at 6 o'clock last evening. BRAGG's force at that point of 27,000 men had left for Tullahoma during the day, and GRANGER captured three pieces of artillery and three hundred prisoners. The rear of BRAGG's train was about nine miles distant, and he, with STANLEY's cavalry, prepared to move forthwith in pursuit. Gen. GRANGER's dispatch states that the Stars and Stripes were displayed from the windows and roofs of many of the houses. It has, in fact, long been known that the main portion of the population of Shelbyville was thoroughly Union at heart. This, in fact, has been a matter of constant reproach to them on the part of the rebel Press. On this score, a letter-writer in a late number of the Atlanta Confederacy says:

"On the train coming down I was told that a short time ago the newly-elected town and county officers of Shelbyville were called upon to take the oath of allegiance to the Confederacy before assuming their public functions, and that they unanimously refused the test. It is assuredly a very distressing dilemma, indeed, for a man's homestead to be situated on the debatable ground between the two great armies, uncertain what changes of position to-morrow may produce. As mine host at Shelbyville said, within a few months he had been under the rules—first, of the Confederates, before the battle of Murfreesboro; subsequently, under that of that humbug ROSECRANS, and now under Gen. BRAGG again—and that it behooves a man of sense either to take a musket, and join the side of his choice, or else keep his mouth shut with regard to his political opinions."

This definite intelligence of the recentness of BRAGG's retreat from Shelbyville to Tullahoma, causes one to regret all the more bitterly the delay that has kept us back for two days, as there is now every certainty that, had we been able to make the intended time, we should have been able to get on BRAGG's rear and caused him to fight a battle under circumstances of great disadvantage to him.

In our march thus far, frequent desertions from the rebel army have taken place, especially from the Tennessee regiments. One of these told me that eighty men from his own regiment had made a combination to desert at the first opportunity. If the Tennessee troops come to surmise that we are going to hold this country, three-fourths of them, at least, will desert the moment they get a chance to do so.

It is rarely that we are able to mark historically the precise point at which great events in the march of progress take their origin. But I think such an epoch-making event was marked yesterday. While Gen. ROSECRANS and Staff were riding down from Beech Grove to Manchester, the General passed the word along the line to his Staff officers to invite all negroes met on the march to come in to us and we would give them protection. This is an interesting fact as marking the first official inauguration of the emancipation policy by a military authority. This is certainly a great advance from the time when commanders would tie up the poor black pariahs who sought refuge within their lines.

I shall never forget the moment when, on a glorious balmy morning of June, marching through the lovely glades and groves of Tennessee, our column, bearing the resplendent oriflame of freedom at its head, was thrilled with that electric utterance of our good and great commander. W. SWINTON.

THE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

Movements of the Rebel Cavalry.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, July 7.

Three hundred rebel cavalry are reported at Rowsburgh. They were threatening to destroy the Frankfort train, when the train was ordered back to Frankfort. Telegraphic communication between here and Frankfort is interrupted. A small party of rebel cavalry is said to have levied on Hon. ROBERT MALLORY at his residence near Lagrange, for a dinner, but made no other depredation.

Reports prevail, but are probably incorrect, that a fight took place between HOBSON's force and the rebel cavalry near Shepperdsville, this evening.

There is nothing new from MORGAN to-day.

Two Union Steamers Captured by Rebels.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, July 8.

The steamers Alice Dean and J. S. McCombs were captured by about 200 rebels at Brandenburgh, Ky., yesterday afternoon. Gunboats are in pursuit.

REBEL INVASION OF INDIANA.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday, July 8.

Reliable information received here to-night states that 400 rebels crossed into Indiana, and are marching on Corydon, with artillery. In a skirmish with the Home Guards, four of the latter were killed.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, July 7.

The ships Grace Darling, Napier, Mary I. Ogden, Gasper, Charger and other first-class vessels, have been loaded for many days, but are detained in port owing to the scarcity of seamen. Many sailors are arriving here who seemed disposed to try their luck in some of the new mining districts before shipping again.

All classes are more subject to mining fever this year than since 1849 and 1850. Trade is falling off latterly. Jobbers are still doing considerable. Grocers look with favor upon staple goods at old prices, but are indisposed to pay the advance which many importers demand. Sugars are firm.

There is great rejoicing at the news from Pennsylvania and Vicksburgh.

THE VICTORY AT HELENA, ARK.

OFFICIAL DISPATCH FROM GEN. HURLBUT.

Gen. Prentiss Attacked by Holmes and Price, with 15,000 Men,

TWELVE HUNDRED PRISONERS CAPTURED

The Rebels Leave between 500 and 600 Killed and Wounded on the Field.

OUR LOSS BUT SIXTY.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

The following has been received at the headquarters of the army:

MEMPHIS, TENN., HEADQUARTERS SIXTEENTH ARMY CORPS, July 5, 1863.

Major-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief, Washington:

Gen. PRENTISS was attacked in force by the rebels under HOLMES and PRICE, at Helena yesterday. He estimates the force at 15,000. I think 9,000 will cover their strength. PRENTISS sustained their attack until 3 P. M., from daylight, when the rebels were repulsed at all points, leaving us 1,200 prisoners. Their loss in killed and wounded, is about from 500 to 600. PRENTISS lost about 60. He has already sent me 560 prisoners, which I send to Alton, to-day, on the Silver Moon.

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General Commanding.

DISPATCHES FROM GEN. PRENTISS.

MEMPHIS, Tuesday, July 7.

Gen. HURLBUT has furnished the following extracts of dispatches from Gen. PRENTISS:

HEADQUARTERS, DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, HELENA, Saturday, July 4.

We have been hard pressed since daylight, by the combined forces of PRICE, HOLMES, MARMADUKE, PARSONS, and others. Thus far we have held our own, and captured several hundred prisoners, whom I send you on board the steamer Tycoon.

The enemy are now evidently preparing for a renewed attack in force. Send on another gunboat, if possible. The Tyler has done good service to-day.

LATER.

3 P. M.—We have repulsed the enemy at every point.

Our soldiers are now collecting their wounded.

We have taken in all 1,200 prisoners.

The rebel loss in killed will reach 500 or 600.

Although the rebels are badly whipped, there is no doubt but that they will renew the attack, and are now massing their troops for that purpose.

My force is inferior to the enemy, but with the aid expected from you, and the gunboats, the rebels may be severely beaten."

The steamers Tycoon and Silver Moon have arrived, with 560 prisoners, captured yesterday, including 30 commissioned officers.

No details of the fight have been received.

Prominent officers report our loss in killed and wounded at not over 60.

The rebels captured six of our guns, which were afterward recaptured.

It is reported the colored troops fought well.

Gen. HURLBUT will send forward reinforcements promptly.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Operations on the Yorktown Peninsula.

Another Raid on the Rebel Communications.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, July 7.

Steamer City of Albany, has arrived from White House. On the morning of the first inst., Gen. GETTY, with 10,000 men, proceeded from the White House to destroy the remaining bridges over the South Anna river. Passing through King William Court-house, Brandywine and Taylorsville, he crossed the Pamunky, and met a large force of rebels near the bridge he intended destroying.

Some skirmishing ensued, when Gen. GETTY retired with a loss of two killed and five wounded. He tore up the railroad track for five or six miles, destroyed a depot and captured seven rebels near Hanover Courthouse. Gen. GETTY returned this morning to the White House, having accomplished most of his mission satisfactorily.

The advantages of the arrangements made by Col. LUDLOW, on the 22d of May last, which cut off all parolling of prisoners of war, compelling the captors to reduce to possession and deliver their prisoners at City Point, are shown in the late battles in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Gen. LEE, if able to make his own escape, will probably be unable to take away any prisoners with him.

Further lists of prisoners who have died in rebel hospitals and prisons have been received by Col. LUDLOW, and forwarded to Washington for publication.

Eighteenth Commencement of St. John's College, Fordham.

Yesterday, the Eighteenth Annual Commencement of St. John's College, Fordham, took place. A large marquee was erected in front of the church of the college, and seats were prepared for Archbishop Hughes, the clergy, and other persons of distinction. The proceedings commenced at 12½ o'clock, immediately after the arrival of the Archbishop. He ascended the platform, and on his right sat Very Rev. Dr. SYNNE, Very Rev. Dr. MORAN, Very Rev. Dr. VERPLANCK; and on his left, FERNANDO WOOD, Alderman FARRY, and others. The other clergymen present were: Father Preston, Father Pike, Father Trainer, Dr. Morrow, Father Kinsella, Father Breen, Dr. Pise of Brooklyn, Father Callaghan, Father McCarthy, Father Hogan, Dr. Joes, Father Phelan, Father McFarrell, Father McGowan, Father Mounsie, Father Ecoler, Father McDonald and Father McMahon.

Following is the order of exercises:

OVERTURE.

Discourse—"American Statesmen," George W. Olwell.
Chorus from "La Muette de Portici," Auber.
Discourse—"Triumph of Principle," James Dougherty.
Chorus from "Fra Diavolo," Auber.
Discourse—"Nobility of Labor," Samuel Owen Murphy.

MUSIC.

The Gold Medal, for the best Biographical Essay, to PHILIP J. B. VAN DYKE, A. B.

Next in merit, MICHAEL B. MCEVOY, A. B. Subject, "Daniel O'Connell." Donor—Rev. THOS. FARRELL, Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, N. Y.

The distribution of premiums followed.

The conferring of degrees and distributing of premiums did not terminate until 6 o'clock, at which time the Archbishop spoke as follows:

SPEECH OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.

MY RESPECTED FRIENDS AND FRIENDS OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE: I am very well aware that being here, I am expected to address this large audience. I am here this day, as was WASHINGTON himself, when under the venerable elm he spoke to the assembled crowds, which no hall was spacious enough to contain. [Applause.] We are all free here to-day, and there are none of those nuisances that need to disturb or follow street-preaching on Sunday. I recollect well in my own time, when I was glad to take to the house, so that when we became fatigued we might take our natural rest. Now is the time especially that education is necessary for this great country. Troubles have arisen here, which have not been owing to the want of education, of the basis on which the country was constructed, but from the want of principle. [Great applause.] For without principle—with of the Constitution—the country or its education is not worth a straw. [Renewed applause.] The Constitution is written on a piece of parchment, and can be read by those who wish to read it, but like any principle from the Constitution, and where is it? The Constitution of the Catholic Church is not thus written on a scroll of parchment, but on the tablet of the heart. [Deafening applause.] For and in behalf of the Constitution, the Judiciary has only the right to speak, but human principles can never be constitutional only so far as they have reference to that which is divine. One of the causes which had given rise to the troubles which now exists, was that the very principles which the Constitution aims at in supporting were never decided in the Supreme Court. That declaration never having been decided in regard to the principles referred to, every one now interpreted the Constitution as he thought proper. [Applause.] The Constitution, as it now stood, was something similar to the Bible in the hands of the Mormons. [Loud laughter and applause.] I, therefore, am bound to say that the Supreme Court of this country is the one to which the people have been taught to look and to respect. In regard to the Catholic Church, she always receives the Scriptures in such a way as to understand by them what they mean. [Loud cheers.] The Scriptures are therefore interpreted in their true sense. No century, no college, nor men, can make learned men of scholars, if the young themselves are not induced to put their shoulders to the work, and determine to be men of education. [Applause.] I therefore implore you now, to begin in this way, as you have never done before, and make yourselves familiar with all those great subjects of science and the other branches of education, based on a foundation of eternal rectitude, which shall never give way. [Applause.] Then, and only then, may we expect greater and brighter hopes to arise for the future of this great and mighty country. There is no building in the air which hath foundations, and if education has no basis to rest upon, it will be of a like nature. [Great applause.]

fectly well how Gen. Couch is situated, and what sort of troops he has under his command.

Continued Cheering News—Captures by Our Cavalry Under Gen. Gregg—Movements of the Militia—Gen. Sigel's Speech, etc.

HARRISBURGH, Tuesday, July 7, 1863.

The news received this morning continues to be of a cheering character. We have a report that yesterday Gen. PLEASANTON divided his cavalry force into two parts, assigning the command of one, which was to operate on the enemy's left, to Gen. GREGG, and the other, which was to operate on the enemy's right, to Gen. KILPATRICK.

Information has been received here that Gen. GREGG proceeded to Greencastle, and succeeded in capturing a large number of prisoners; also, a portion of the enemy's wagon-train. No news has been received of Gen. KILPATRICK's expedition.

Col. PRICE is operating successfully in the vicinity of Chambersburgh, having already taken 150 prisoners, and a large number of supply wagons.

Gen. BURNS, at the head of the militia force, is now at Nolan's Gap, on the South Mountain. The position is a very important one, and doubtless he will have a hand in the work yet. His force is a part of the portion of the Army of the Potomac, having joined the right wing of that body. At present Gen. BURNS is acting under Gen. MEADE's orders.

It is believed at headquarters that the great battle will take place not far from Williamsport, probably between that place and Hagerstown. Both armies are in motion. The only possible chance that Lee has of escaping is by marching up the Potomac to Cumberland, or beyond, where the river is sufficiently narrow and shallow to admit of crossing. MEADE, however, is pressing hard upon LEE's flank and rear, and may perhaps succeed in baffling every plan that Lee may project for retreating.

Scores of rebel deserters are daily passing through this place on their way to Baltimore and Philadelphia. Parties coming from above represent the secessionists to be full of them. They are heartily sensible of their hotel failure at invasion, and are fully prepared to abandon all connection with the rebel army. Prisoners are also arriving in large numbers. One, an officer, named McRAY, attached to a South Carolina regiment, stated that the rebels were defeated in consequence of BEAUREGARD failing to come to time. It was an important part of Lee's plan that BEAUREGARD should be on this side of the Potomac. He was confident that the latter would yet turn up in time to do humane service. Two deserters in the same car with McRAY were treated by him with the utmost contempt.

Hundreds of farmers and others who came on this side of the Susquehannah for safety, are returning to their homes. The restriction has been taken off the travel across the bridge, and any one is at liberty to go either to Carlisle or Gettysburgh. Merchants are bringing back their goods, and Harrisburgh is once more assuming a business air.

Major-Gen. SIGEL arrived yesterday. In the evening he was serenaded, at the Jones House, by the band attached to the Twenty-second New-York regiment. A large concourse of citizens surrounded the hotel and vociferously shouted for SIGEL. Presently he made his appearance, and, having been introduced to the assemblage by Gen. HALL, spoke as follows:

CITIZENS AND SOLDIERS: I thank you, and especially my friend, Gen. HALL, for the attention you do me here this evening. I feel honored at being made the recipient of your favor, and by being introduced by Gen. HALL, the representative of the army of New-York. He comes from the Empire State, where I was once a soldier. You can now perceive that the efforts of our militia have not been in vain. It is the duty of every man capable of being an officer or soldier to step forward and attach himself to some military organization. We see regiments coming from New-York join hand in hand with the Pennsylvania troops for the protection of their soil. (Cheers.) I hope you will be strong enough to prevent all further invasion of your State. The militia of Pennsylvania have done nobly. But you know the militia are not like veteran soldiers, and require the assistance of the people to recruit them up and fill their ranks. Do not fail, then, to do your duty toward them. I am glad to learn that the Eleventh Army corps, under their Commander, have behaved bravely. I am sorry to say I was not with the army during the three days' fight; but you may rest assured I shall not be satisfied until our enemies are driven to the last corner. (Cheers.)

Gen. HALL was then called for, and made a few remarks, after which Gen. SIGEL again stepped upon the balcony, and proposed three cheers for the success of the Army of the Potomac, which were given with a will.

Gen. COUCH was next called upon, but it happened he was at the Department headquarters attending to important business. The band then discoursed a Rocky air, after which the crowd dispersed.

The Rebel Position—Paroled Prisoners.

HARRISBURGH, Sunday, July 5, 1863.

The rebel position to-day seems to be on the South Mountains, with the right extending to nearly the extreme verge. All their forces are concentrated on the mountains, the numerous gaps and passes of which are being strongly fortified and guarded. There is some doubt here among the leading authorities as to the real intentions of the enemy—whether he designs to give another battle on his chosen ground, or is simply endeavoring to regress the Potomac. It is admitted that he has a formidable position, and can keep at bay twice the number of men contained in the Army of the Potomac—that is, if an attack is made from the front. The natural way to approach him and inflict upon him heavy damage is to make an attack simultaneously upon the front and rear. Whether that plan will be followed time will develop. It is sufficient to state here that Chambersburgh is occupied by our troops to-day. That force will be rapidly and largely augmented, and in the course of time LEE will undoubtedly find a new source of trouble.

One thousand paroled Union prisoners arrived here this morning, and were transported to Philadelphia. They walked the entire distance from Gettysburgh to Carlisle, leaving left the former place at noon on Friday morning. A few of the number were wounded. Immediately upon being taken prisoners, they were sent to the rear and strongly guarded. They had an opportunity of seeing the wagon and ammunition trains of the enemy, which they represent to cover acres of ground. Apparently he had a good supply of ammunition, but was not prodigal in its use. The rebels conversed freely with our men, many of them declaring that DAVIS, LEE and other superior officers were greatly disappointed with the result of the invasion. They counted on taking Baltimore, Harrisburgh and Philadelphia without much trouble, believing that MEADE would not be able to intercept them in time. They cared nothing for the militia regiments, and laughed at the idea of such troops opposing their progress through Pennsylvania. They were obliged to come here to get something to eat. They had been kept on short rations for months previous, and nothing but iron rigor prevented open mutiny. They subsisted—now they were here—wholly upon what they had captured. A large herd of cattle was in the rear of the army, also large quantities of provisions of various kinds. They treated the prisoners as well as could be expected. And a number of cattle killed for their benefit, and distributed to each a quart of flour. As an evidence that Harrisburgh is not entirely destitute of charitable and patriotic people, it may be remarked, that when the prisoners arrived here two women, with baskets filled with sandwiches and pies, approached the cars and soon made quick work in giving away their stores. In this connection it will not be amiss to notice an act of kindness performed by Mrs. CHARLES M. BAILEY, an estimable lady of this place. On the arrival of the New-York troops, she gave at her house for three days meat and drink to one hundred and twenty-five men, and her tender care will never be forgotten by a member of the Twenty-third New-York regiment, who lay sick with the typhoid fever, for more than a week.

The number of rebel deserters that have come into our lines within the past week is enormous. They have flocked in from all directions. A Captain of the First New-York cavalry, which regiment is serving with Col. PRICE's force, informs me that the country is full of deserters, awaiting an opportunity to give themselves up. Last week 1,500 deserters were rationed at Chambersburgh. The railroad depot in this city, without giving the precise locality to which Gen. W. F. BURNS's forces are now stationed, I presume I am free to state they have advanced from Carlisle, and are holding an important position on South Mountain. One hundred prisoners were captured by Gen. BURNS to-day.

Fourth of July was celebrated yesterday by a National salute from a six-gun battery at daylight and at noon.

GEN. ROSECRANS' CAMPAIGN.

Interesting Details of His Movement in Pursuit of Bragg.

Inauguration of the Emancipation Policy by Gen. Rosecrans.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND, MANCHESTER, TENN., Sunday, June 28, 1863.

From the moment the three main columns by which the army has been advancing met at Beech Grove, it was from that moment between us and the rebels merely a question of legs. All possible strategy reduced itself to the simple problem of a race for Tullahoma, and the devil catch the hindmost.

Up to that point, it was possible to blind and deceive the enemy. So long as our left wing (McCOOK's corps) moved directly south on the Murfreesboro and Shelbyville Pike—so long as our reserves and our cavalry menaced the rebel stronghold on lines still further to the west—so long as our centre (THOMAS' corps) continued at Hoover's Gap, threatening Fairfield and Wartrace, and thus looking to a direct advance on Shelbyville—so long it was possible for Gen. ROSECRANS to mask his real intentions, and make BRAGG believe that Shelbyville was really his objective point.

But—the moment McCOOK, having recovered Liberty Gap, left the Shelbyville road, and struck eastward, to form a junction with the centre corps at Beech Grove, on the Manchester Pike, and the left wing (CRITTENDEN's corps) was swung round toward Manchester—from that moment, I say, the real nature, object and end of the movement became apparent. It was obviously a strategic manœuvre on the rebel right flank, with a view of grasping their communications at Tullahoma; and it became, as I said before, a race for who would get there first. Last night found the centre corps and headquarters established at Manchester, with the corps of McCOOK and CRITTENDEN pushing on after us as rapidly as the roads would permit. This morning finds the main force well massed here, on the point of starting on the final decisive march.

From Manchester to Tullahoma is twelve miles; from Shelbyville is eighteen miles. For once, therefore, we have the shortest and interior line, though the rebels have this advantage over us, that they have a railroad line from Shelbyville to Tullahoma.

It becomes, therefore, a problem of portentous moment to determine at what point the rebels discovered our real intentions, and began movements for the purpose of checking them, by a change of front from Shelbyville and Wartrace to Tullahoma.

There is pretty good evidence that up to Thursday BRAGG continued to think our designs were against Shelbyville, for on that day the regiment which was on post duty at that town, was hurried off to Shelbyville. By Friday, therefore, or Saturday at furthest, it must have become apparent to BRAGG that Tullahoma, not Shelbyville was our objective. From that moment he began a left, backward, swinging movement, and it is definitely ascertained, that for the past twenty-four hours the rebels have been putting forth every effort to mass their troops and trains at Tullahoma.

There is, accordingly, every present prospect, that, within from twenty-four to forty-eight hours from this time (Sunday morning) we shall have met the army of BRAGG in a great battle at or near Tullahoma. With respect to the defences of Tullahoma I have no precise information. It is understood, however, that the Northern approaches of the town are covered by a line of rifle pits and redans, and by abattis. Gen. ROSECRANS will of course manœuvre so as to take it from its weak side, if indeed there be any necessity for taking this particular position at all, for if we shall be successful in anticipating BRAGG, and shall be able to seize any point on his line of retreat, we shall be able to compel him to fight a battle on ground of our own selection, and with his back to Murfreesboro.

My last letter brought the advance of the centre corps and headquarters to Beach Grove on Friday night, waiting till the right wing should arrive from Liberty Gap, and the left wing should have swung round and come abreast of us on the Manchester road. During the night and on Saturday morning, McCOOK's corps came over and formed a junction with THOMAS' corps at Beach Grove, and CRITTENDEN's corps, (kept back by the horrible condition of the road on which it was moving,) though not so well advanced as could have been wished, was yet within cooperating distance.

At the time of my last writing, McCOOK had carried Liberty Gap. The defile had been held by the Fifth and Fifteenth Arkansas, LIDDELL's brigade and GARRELL's battery. The assault on our part was made on Thursday by JOHNSON's and DAVIS' divisions, and the powerful position carried in a brilliant manner, with a loss on the part of JOHNSON of 131 killed and wounded, and on the part of DAVIS of 35. On Friday McCOOK pushed forward, uncovering the Gap handsomely, driving the enemy some distance south, and taking some twenty prisoners. This being done, he crossed his command over by a road just above Liberty Gap to the Manchester Pike, making a junction with THOMAS' corps yesterday.

My detailed record of the doings of THOMAS' corps, brought the account up to Friday morning, at which time the rebels still continued to hold the southern mouth of Hoover's Gap, the line of Garrison Creek, and the Fairfield road to Fairfield and thence to Wartrace. The position was an extremely strong one, and the rebels had twenty pieces of artillery posted for its defence. The rebel troops consisted of the whole of STEWART's division, comprising the brigades of BATES, BROWN, CLAYTON and BENJAMIN JOHNSON. Gen. THOMAS formed his command at noon, deploying his divisions on the hill-slopes of Garrison Creek. The rebels at first held on very stubbornly, but a vigorous charge broke them and they retreated down the road toward Fairfield. A citizen who lives on that road, informs that they passed his house (which Gen. STEWART had as his headquarters) at the double-quick, saying that they would make Wartrace that night. Our loss in this brush was thirty killed and wounded. The rebels lost much more heavily—one regiment being cut almost to pieces and a number of prisoners captured.

While this was going on, on Friday afternoon, WILSON's mounted brigade was sent by a detour to block up the lower end of Matt's Hollow, a long defile five miles south of Beach Grove. The rebels, however, fearing to be thus bagged, had made a hasty retreat to Manchester. WILSON accordingly advanced on Manchester on the Duck River. REYNOLDS' division was in the afternoon pushed down the Manchester road below Matt's Hollow, to within six miles of Manchester.

Saturday morning ROUSSEAU's and NAGLEE's divisions moved out and took Fairfield, and then moved by a cross road, making the connection with us on the Manchester Pike. NAGLEE's and BRANNAN's divisions meanwhile pushed straight on toward Manchester.

Thus the operations of Friday forced the whole length of that powerful line of mountain defiles running across from Hoover's to Liberty Gap. The rebels had fully intended to have made a southern resistance along this Water line, and had made all their calculations accordingly. But on finding that we had so extended a front, they became afraid of being overflanked, and accordingly abandoned these strongholds with much less resistance than they might otherwise have made.

It seems that up to this time, the rebels were fully under the impression that ROSECRANS was simply making a vigorous demonstration to cover up the supposed withdrawal of the main portion of his army, to reinforce GRANT. The properties of the demonstration have now, however, dissipated them of any such illusions.

WILSON's command reached Winchester early yesterday morning, capturing a detail of the enemy who had been sent up to look after some supplies. The garrison that had been stationed here was withdrawn on Thursday, as BRAGG was anticipating a general attack on Shelbyville, and withdrawing in all the detachments. Soon afterward the head of THOMAS' column reached Manchester, and evening found the centre column and headquarters encamped on the banks of the Duck.

We would have advanced last night, and even this morning, had it not been for the unavoidable delay in CRITTENDEN's corps. As I write the General has just reached headquarters. The General tells me that his command is still embarrassed on the Bradyville and Manchester road, from ten to a dozen miles back of here. It will be late to-night before he can possibly have the head of his column here. According to the programme he was to have been here on Friday night. We have thus lost one entire days, in a crisis when every hour is of inexpressible value. This is certainly much to be regretted, though the fact is owing to causes entirely beyond Gen. CRITTENDEN's control—the tremendous rains of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday having made the dirt road on which his column was advancing all but impassable.

Gen. ROSECRANS has this moment read me a dispatch (the substance of which I have sent you by telegraph) from Gen. GORDON GRANGER, announcing the capture by that commander of the town of Shelbyville, which was till yesterday the headquarters of Gen. BRAGG. Gen. GRANGER's command, forming the reserve corps, was assigned the rôle of demonstrating vigorously down the road from Murfreesboro to Shelbyville, with the discretionary power of moving, if he saw fit, on Shelbyville. Learning that the place was being evacuated by BRAGG, he pushed on, reaching it at 6 o'clock last evening. BRAGG's force at that point of 37,000 men had left for Tullahoma during the day, and GRANGER captured three pieces of artillery and three hundred prisoners. The rear of BRAGG's train was about nine miles distant, and he, with STANLEY's cavalry, prepared to move forthwith in pursuit. Gen. GRANGER's dispatch states that the Stars and Stripes were displayed from the windows and roofs of many of the houses. It has, in fact, long been known that the main portion of the population of Shelbyville was thoroughly Union at heart. This, in fact, has been a matter of constant reproach to them on the part of the rebel Press. On this score, a letter-writer in a late number of the Atlanta Confederacy says:

"On the train coming down I was told that a short time ago the newly-elected town and county officers of Shelbyville were called upon to take the oath of allegiance to the Confederacy before assuming their public functions, and that they unanimously refused the test. It is assuredly a very distressing dilemma, indeed, for a man to be compelled to be situated on the debatable ground between the two great armies, uncertain what changes of position to-morrow may produce. As mine host at Shelbyville said, within a few months he had been under the ruling sway of the Confederacy, before the battle at Murfreesboro; subsequently, under that of that humbug ROSECRANS, and now under Gen. BRAGG again—and that it behooves a man of sense either to take a musket, and join the side of his choice, or else keep his mouth shut with regard to his political opinions."

This definite intelligence of the recentness of BRAGG's retreat from Shelbyville to Tullahoma, causes one to regret all the more bitterly the delays that has kept us back for two days, as there is now every certainty that, had we been able to make the intended time, we should have been able to get on BRAGG's rear and caused him to fight a battle under circumstances of great disadvantage to him.

In our march thus far, frequent desertions from the rebel army have taken place, especially from the Tennessee regiments. One of these told me that eighty men from his own regiment had made a combination to desert at the first opportunity. If the Tennessee troops come to surmise that we are going to hold this country, three-fourths of them, at least, will desert the moment they get a chance to do so.

It is rarely that we are able to mark historically the precise point at which great events in the march of progress take their origin. But I think such an epoch-making event was marked yesterday. While Gen. ROSECRANS and Staff were riding down from Beech Grove to Manchester, the General passed the word along the line to his Staff officers to invite all negroes met on the march to come in to us and we would give them protection. This is an interesting fact as marking the first official inauguration of the emancipation policy by a military authority. This is certainly a great advance from the time when commanders would tie up the poor black pariahs who sought refuge within their lines.

I shall never forget the moment when, on a glorious balmy morning of June, marching through the lovely glades and groves of Tennessee, our column, bearing the resplendent ordnance of freedom at its head, was thrilled with that electric utterance of our good and great commander.

THE WAR IN KENTUCKY.

Movements of the Rebel Cavalry.

LOUISVILLE, Tuesday, July 7.

Three hundred rebel cavalry are reported at Brandenburgh. They were threatening to destroy the Frankfort train, when the train was ordered back to Frankfort. Telegraphic communication between here and Frankfort is interrupted. A small party of rebel cavalry is said to have levied on Hon. ROBERT MALLORY at his residence near Lagrange, for a dinner, but made no other depredation.

Reports prevail, but are probably incorrect, that a fight took place between HOBSON's force and the rebel cavalry near Shepperdsville, this evening.

There is nothing new from MORGAN to-day.

Two Union Steamers Captured by Rebels.

LOUISVILLE, Wednesday, July 8.

The steamers Alice Dean and J. S. McCombs were captured by about 200 rebels at Brandenburgh, Ky., yesterday afternoon. Gunboats are in pursuit.

The Brazilian Difficulty Arbitrated.

It will be remembered that in the month of June, 1862, a disturbance occurred in Rio de Janeiro, between the officers of a British frigate in that port and the Brazilian local authorities, which subsequently became a topic of international inquiry and controversy between the Governments of Great Britain and Brazil. The question in dispute was referred to the King of Belgium for his arbitration, and that monarch has just rendered his decision in favor of the rightfulness of the conduct of the Brazilian authorities in the premises. The award made by His Majesty to this effect has been communicated by the Brazilian Minister at Brussels to Mr. LISBOA, the Minister of Brazil near our Government, in the following dispatch:

IMPERIAL LEGATION OF BRAZIL, BRUSSELS, June 25, 1863.

MOST ILLUSTRIOUS AND EXCELLENT SIR: It is with the greatest satisfaction that I communicate to your Excellency that I had the honor day before yesterday to receive from the hands of his Majesty the King of the Belgians his decision in arbitration of the question relating to the officers of the English frigate Forte, and which his Majesty concludes in the following terms: "We are of opinion that in the manner in which the Brazilian laws were applied to the English officers there was neither premeditation of offence nor offence itself against the British navy."

Joining with your Excellency in congratulations on this subject, I have the honor to offer you the assurances of my highest consideration.

JOAQUIM THOMAS DO AMARAL.

To his Excellency Counselor MIGUEL MARIA LISBOA.

A PATRIOTIC NEIGHBORHOOD.—The residents of Fiftieth-street, between First and Third avenues, on Tuesday night held a jubilee over the news of the surrender of Vicksburgh. Nearly all of the houses were brilliantly illuminated, the national emblem was displayed, lanterns hung out, cannon fired and crackers and fireworks set off. The street was crowded with people and the rejoicing over the victory unanimous.

THE VICTORY AT HELENA, ARK.

OFFICIAL DISPATCH FROM GEN. HURLBUT.

Gen. Prentiss Attacked by Holmes and Price, with 15,000 Men.

TWELVE HUNDRED PRISONERS CAPTURED

The Rebels Leave between 500 and 600 Killed and Wounded on the Field.

OUR LOSS BUT SIXTY.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 8.

The following has been received at the headquarters of the army:

MEMPHIS, TENN., HEADQUARTERS STEWARTS ARMY CORPS, July 5, 1863.

Major-Gen. H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief, Washington:

Gen. PRENTISS was attacked in force by the rebels under HOLMES and PRICE, at Helena yesterday. He estimates the force at 15,000. I think 9,000 will cover their strength. PRENTISS sustained their attack until 9 P. M., from daylight, when the rebels were repulsed at all points, leaving us 1,200 prisoners. Their loss in killed and wounded, is about from 500 to 600. PRENTISS lost about 60. He has already sent me 600 prisoners, which I send on Atlic, to-day, on the Silver Moon.

S. A. HURLBUT,
Major-General Commanding.

DISPATCHES FROM GEN. PRENTISS.

MEMPHIS, Tuesday, July 7.

Gen. HURLBUT has furnished the following extracts of dispatches from Gen. PRENTISS:

HEADQUARTERS, DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, HELENA, Saturday, July 4.

We have been hard pressed since daylight, by the combined forces of PRICE, HOLMES, MARMADUKE, PARSONS, and others. Thus far we have held our own, and captured several hundred prisoners, whom I send you on board the steamer Tycoon.

The enemy are now evidently preparing for a renewed attack in force. Send us another gunboat, if possible. The Tyler has done good service to-day.

LATER.

3 P. M.—We have repulsed the enemy at every point.

Our soldiers are now collecting their wounded.

We have taken in all 1,200 prisoners.

The rebel loss in killed will reach 500 or 600.

Although the rebels are badly whipped, there is no doubt but that they will renew the attack, and are now massing their troops for that purpose.

My force is inferior to the enemy, but with the aid expected from you, and the gunboats, the rebels may be severely beaten."

The steamers Tycoon and Silver Moon have arrived, with 600 prisoners, captured yesterday, including 20 commissioned officers.

No details of the fight have been received.

Preliminary advices report our loss in killed and wounded at not over 60.

The rebels captured six of our guns, which were afterward recaptured.

It is reported the colored troops fought well.

Gen. HURLBUT will send forward reinforcements promptly.

Eighteenth Commencement of St. John's College, Fordham.

Yesterday, the Eighteenth Annual Commencement of St. John's College, Fordham, took place. A large marquee was erected in front of the church of the college, and seats were prepared for Archbishop HUGHES, the clergy, and other persons of distinction. The proceedings commenced at 12½ o'clock, immediately after the arrival of the Archbishop. He ascended the platform, and on his right sat Very Rev. Dr. SZANTA, Very Rev. Dr. MORAN, Very Rev. Dr. VERSLANY, and on his left, FERNANDO WOOD, Alderman FARLEY, and others. The other clergymen present were: Father Preston, Father Pise, Father Tainor, Dr. Morrow, Father Kinsella, Father Breen, Dr. Pise of Brooklyn, Father Callaghan, Father McCarthy, Father Hogan, Dr. Joes, Father Phelan, Father McFarrell, Father McGowan, Father Monagle, Father Essler, Father McDonald and Father McMahon.

The distribution of premiums followed.

The comforting of degrees and distributing of premiums did not terminate until 6 o'clock, at which time the Archbishop spoke as follows:

SPEECH OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.

MY REVERENDED FRIENDS AND PUPILS OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE: I am very well aware that being here, I am expected to address this large audience. I am here this day, as was WASHINGTON himself, when under the venerable elms he spoke to the assembled crowds, which no hall was spacious enough to contain. [Applause.] We are all free here to-day, and there are none of those nuisances that need to disturb or follow street-preaching on Sunday. I recollect well in my own time, when I was glad to take to the house, so that when we became fatigued we might take our natural rest. Now is the time especially that education is necessary for this great country. Troubles have arisen here, which have not been owing to the want of education, or the basis on which the country was constructed, but from the want of principle. [Great applause.] For without principle—talk of the Constitution—the country or its execution is not worth a straw. [Renewed applause.] The Constitution is written on a piece of parchment, and can be read by those who wish to read it, but take away principle from the Constitution, and where is it? The Constitution of the Catholic Church is not thus written on a scroll of parchment, but on the tablet of the heart. [Deafening applause.] For and in behalf of the Constitution, the Judiciary has only the right to speak, but human principles can never be Constitutional only so far as they have reference to that which is divine. One of the causes which had given rise to the troubles which now exists, was that the very principles which the Constitution stood by in supporting were never decided in the Supreme Court. That declaration never having been decided in regard to the principles referred to, every one now interpreted the Constitution as he thought proper. [Applause.] The Constitution, as it now stood, was something similar to the Bible in the hands of the Mormons. [Loud laughter and applause.] I, therefore, am bound to say that the Supreme Court of this country is the one to which the people have been taught to look and to respect. In regard to the Catholic Church, she always receives the Scriptures in such a way as to understand by them what they mean. [Loud cheers.] The Scriptures are therefore interpreted in their true sense. No country, no college, nor men, can make learned men of scholars, if the young themselves are not induced to put their shoulders to the work, and determine to be men of education. [Applause.]

I therefore implore you now, to begin in this way, as you have never done before, and make yourselves familiar with all these great subjects of science and the other branches of education, based on a foundation of eternal rectitude, which shall never give way. [Applause.] Then, and only then, may we expect greater and brighter hopes to arise for the future of this great and mighty country. There is no building in the air which hath foundations, and if education has no basis to rest upon, it will be of a like nature. [Great applause.]
